Most people take one look at the Chinese script and say 'Oh no, I couldn't possibly learn that, it's much too complicated' or perhaps 'I'm no good at drawing so I wouldn't be able to write Chinese'. By the time you get to the end of this book you will have realized that neither of these statements is true. You may decide that you have not got the time to learn the Chinese script but that is a different matter. Anybody of average intelligence and with a reasonable visual memory who is prepared to put in the necessary time can master the Chinese script.

The Chinese script is an amazing tool with which you will be able to go some way towards understanding Chinese, one of the world's most ancient languages, and its culture.

Teach Yourself Beginner's Chinese Script starts from scratch, explaining the origins of the language and how characters have evolved. It teaches you how to write characters correctly from the beginning and, through a series of carefully graded exercises, how to understand enough from signs, directions, instructions and even menus to be able to get by. You will surprise yourself with your ingenuity and your ability to guess correctly, based on the sound logic learnt from this book.

The characters used in this book are always in the simplified script except for one or two full-form characters, which are to be found in various signs and notices. Simplified characters are used in the People's Republic of China, Singapore and increasingly in overseas Chinese communities. They are commonly taught to foreign students learning Chinese. Full-form characters are used in Taiwan and Hong Kong (although this may change in the future in the case of Hong Kong).

This book is to be enjoyed, with many examples taken from real life. By the time you have finished it, we hope you will have caught the Chinese bug – hours of enjoyment (and hard work) lie ahead of you!

How to use the book

The book is divided into two main parts. Units 1–4 introduce you to the origins of the Chinese script and explain how characters and words are formed and the basic rules in writing them. There is a mini-test after Unit 4 to enable you to check your progress so far.

Units 5–9 introduce you to real-life situations such as reading signs, maps, notices and even menus. You will be able to write numbers and dates, tell the time and fill out simple forms. There is another test following Unit 9.

Unit 10 explains how to use a Chinese–English dictionary and Chinese word-processing packages with concrete examples. There is also a brief introduction to Chinese idioms. Whilst at the beginning of the book we provide spaces for you to write your answers into the book, you should really work with a notebook alongside you, where you can practise writing Chinese characters and make your own notes to help you remember what you've learnt.

At the back of the book

At the back of the book there is a reference section which contains:

- a Taking it further section to encourage you to extend your skills in Chinese
- a Key to the exercises
- a Table of radicals for easy reference
- a Guide to pronunciation and tones
- Useful public signs and notices
- a Chinese–English vocabulary list containing all the characters in the course, listed according to radical and with the number of the unit where they first occurred
- an English–Chinese vocabulary list containing all the most important words which have occurred in the course

01 origins of the script

In this unit you will learn

- what the earliest characters looked like
- about the evolution of characters over the years
- ten basic characters

Many ancient peoples wrote in symbols, including the Chinese. The most well known are perhaps Egyptian hieroglyphics carved on stone or written on papyrus. What was common to all the known ancient scripts was that at their earliest form of development they consisted of picture signs, many of which looked quite similar.

Chinese
Hittite Egyptian
Sumerian

The differences, however, are also striking. Look at two of the signs for water for instance (third column from right). The Egyptian sign seems to represent calm water, whereas the Chinese sign indicates a winding river flooding its banks, which is just what the Yellow River (known as the cradle of Chinese civilization) used to do.

We still use symbols or signs today as a kind of international language which overcomes communication barriers on a very basic but necessary level.

Exercise 1

The earliest examples of written Chinese are found on the oracle bones used in divination rites in the Shang dynasty (c1500BC–1066BC). Nearly 2,500 separate characters have been found on bone fragments dating back to this period, so the total in use must have been much greater than this. Of these characters, approximately 600 have been identified.

These are characters appearing on oracle bones. They are very different from the writing of today.

The first step in building up a written language in China was the use of pictured objects or pictographs to represent the objects themselves. About 10% of all characters in modern Chinese come from these pictographs. Here are a few examples of pictographs showing the evolution of some characters into their present form. The earliest form of the character is on the left, the one used today (hand-written) is on the extreme right.

Exercise 2

Match up the pictured objects in column 1 with the old forms of the pictograph in columns 2 and 3 and the modern-day form (printed) in column 4 (simplified characters in brackets; see i section below). Write the numbers in the space provided in the last column, for example: 1A 2B 3C 4D. Then check your answers in the Key to the exercises on page 123.

B			雨	馬(马)	4B
C			山	魚(鱼)	4C
D			車	雨	4D
E		雨	馬	山	4E
F			魚	子	4F

Why did the ancient Chinese writing system survive, while that of the Egyptians, Hittites or Sumerians did not? One of the major reasons must be that China was unified at a very early stage in history by the first Qin emperor, Qin Shi Huangdi, in 221BC and unlike the Roman Empire, for example, has stayed unified until the present day. Qin Shi Huangdi also unified the Chinese script. As some of you may know, Chinese has many different spoken forms or dialects, but they are all written in exactly the same way, so all literate Chinese can read the same newspapers and the same books. Japan sent students to study in China as early as the Tang dynasty (AD618–907), so that when the Japanese started to keep written records they ‘borrowed’ Chinese characters which are still in use in modern written Japanese and are referred to as kanji. The Koreans did the same thing although modern Korean contains no Chinese characters.

Exercise 3

See if you can remember or work out what the characters below mean. Don't worry if you can't; you can always check your answers in the Key to the exercises.

1 月 2 木 3 山 4 雨 5 日
6 鱼 7 马 8 车 9 子 10 人

i Simplified characters were introduced in the People's Republic of China after 1949. The purpose was to enable the population, who were largely illiterate, to learn the characters more easily. Even though in the early 1950s Chairman Mao advocated the use of romanization to replace characters, this has never happened to any significant extent. The use of romanization (transcribing Chinese sounds into the Latin script) is mainly confined to some brand names, company names, shop signs and street signs, where it appears above or below the Chinese characters.

02

how Chinese characters are formed

- In this unit you will learn
- what radicals are
 - various ways in which characters are composed
 - more than 30 new characters/radicals

In Unit 1, we saw how characters evolved from drawings of objects to what they look like today. Drawings, however vivid they might be, are not sufficient to express more complex concepts and ideas, especially more abstract ones. Over the years, these pictographs were extended or combined to form ideographs. ‘Two people’ on top of the character for ‘earth’ meant ‘to sit’ 坐; a ‘woman’ 女 with a ‘child’ 子 beside her meant ‘good’ 好; a ‘pig’ 豕 under a ‘roof’ 宀 meant ‘home’ 家, etc.

Try the following exercise and see if you can work out what these ancient ideographs are trying to express.

Exercise 1

Write out the meaning of the following characters or ideographs. The components of each character are presented with their meaning. You have already seen some of the components in Unit 1. Most of them are meaningful characters in their own right.

				Meaning
囚	人	person	口	enclosure	_____
明	日	sun	月	moon	_____
坐	人	person	土	earth	_____
休	人*	person	木	tree	_____
男	田	field	力	strength	_____

* In combination 人 becomes 亻 on the left-hand side.

Now let’s see if you have understood them correctly. A ‘person’ in an ‘enclosure’ is a ‘prisoner’. ‘Sun’ and ‘moon’ together means ‘bright’. And as we just saw, ‘two people’ ‘down to earth’ means ‘to sit’. When a ‘person’ is against a ‘tree’, s/he is ‘resting’. The ‘strength’ in the ‘field’ comes from a ‘man’ or a ‘male’. Do these make sense to you?

The following characters are composed in the same way as those in Exercise 1. Let’s see if you can work out their meanings. Remember these characters were made a long time ago. The concepts in those days might not always be the same as we perceive them today. For instance, why is it ‘good’ to have a child? Because in traditional Chinese society, as in many others around the world, a child, and more particularly a male child, was necessary to carry on the family line and to worship the ancestors. Children were (and are) also necessary to work in the fields, particularly in the labour-intensive paddy fields.

Exercise 2

Write out the meaning of the following characters in the space provided.

				Meaning
信	亻	person	言	speech/words	_____
鲜	鱼	fish	羊	sheep	_____
安	宀	roof	女	woman	_____

A person's words convey a 'message' or can be passed on in writing as a 'letter'. Fish and sheep's meat must be eaten when they are 'fresh'. Once there is a woman in a household, there will be a family which brings 'stability', hence the meaning of 'safe' and 'secure'.

Did you get any of them right? If you did, well done! If you didn't, it's not surprising at this stage. These meanings may be very obscure to the beginner but they tell us a lot about traditional Chinese values such as the importance of the family and of having a male heir.

Word building was not just a matter of putting two pictographs together. This method would still not have created enough new characters to convey many of the ideas and concepts which exist in a developed language. Another method of creating new characters which dated after the Shang dynasty (c1500–1066BC) is sometimes called the phonogram. It is made up of two components, one of which is usually known as the radical and the other the phonetic, which gives a clue as to the character's pronunciation.

What is a radical?

A radical is a component of a character. It sometimes gives us a partial idea of the meaning of the whole character. Just as the Greek prefix 'phil' tells us that the word has something to do with 'love' (philanthropy is the love of humankind, a philosopher is a lover of wisdom etc.), when a Chinese sees a character with the 'heart' radical written 心 or 忄, depending on its position, s/he can assume that the character has something to do with the emotions. For example, 愛 means 'love; to love', 恨 means 'hate; to hate', 怕 means 'to fear'.

Each character has at least one radical. Some characters are built up of radicals only, but in these cases, one or more of the radicals is acting as the phonetic in that particular character. Let's look at the character 想 xiǎng which means 'to miss' or 'think of' (a person or thing) or just 'to think'. It is made up of the 'heart' radical 心 and two other radicals, 木 'wood/tree' and 目 'eye', but in this case, when 木 and 目 are put together 相, they are pronounced xiāng and they provide the phonetic component for the character 想. Another example is the character 江 jiāng, 'river', which is made up of the 'water' radical 氵 and the radical 工 gōng, meaning 'work'. From the meaning of the character, 'river', 工 is obviously the phonetic element here although it is not particularly helpful as the sound has changed so much. As you can see from all of this, radicals are not equivalent to letters in English. All radicals mean something in themselves, but this does not always help with the meaning of the character as a whole. For instance, the fact that the radical for a particular character is a dot 丶 or a horizontal or vertical line 一 | helps us to find it in the dictionary but gives us no indication of the meaning of the character whatsoever.

Here is a table of some single- or two-stroke radicals which do not necessarily carry any meaning. The ones with meaning that you have met so far are listed in a table at the end of this unit. Refer to the radical table at the end of the book for a fuller list.

There are around 190–230 radicals in Chinese writing. The discrepancy in numbers results from how some of the radicals are grouped and the inclusion or exclusion of some of the complicated ones. At the beginning of a Chinese dictionary there is usually an index of radicals. The characters in the dictionary are based on the index. In Unit 10 we will show you how to look up a character in a Chinese dictionary.

How are characters formed?

There are a number of ways in which characters are formed. The examples in Exercises 1 and 2 represent one of the most common ways: combining the meanings of two radicals to form a new meaning. The following are some more examples of this.

Radical + radical

竹* bamboo + 毛 fur/hair = 笔 Chinese writing brush
 言* speech + 舌 tongue = 话 words, speech; to speak 小 small + 大 big = 尖 sharp, pointed 日 sun + 月 moon = 明 bright

* Note that 言 becomes 讠 when acting as the radical on the left-hand side of a simplified character, and 竹 becomes 𪔐 when acting as the radical on top of a character.

As you may have observed, the position of a radical in a character varies. It can be on the left or right side of a character, or it can be on the top or bottom of a character. It can also be on the inside or outside of a character. It is important to know where a particular radical occurs in a character so that you can identify it and be able to look it up in the dictionary (more on this later). The radical's actual position normally has no bearing on the meaning or interpretation of the character.

Exercise 3

You know 人 means 'person', 木 means 'wood/tree' and 火 means 'fire'. What do you think the following characters mean?

Radicals	Character(s)	Meaning
人 + 人	= 从*	_____
人 + 人 + 人	= 众*	_____
木 + 木	= 林	_____
木 + 木 + 木	= 森	_____
火 + 火	= 炎	_____
火 + 火 + 火	= 焱	_____

* These are simplified characters. The principle of making characters, however, remains the same.

In some combinations, as in Exercise 3, the meaning is very clear to the Westerner (at least after it has been given!), but in others it remains very obscure. It is important to be aware that there is not a consistent logic inherent in the formation of all Chinese characters, so that although we can see in some of today's characters how they have developed from their earliest forms, there is no methodology which will serve us for them all. In addition, concepts have changed. Pigs 豕 are rarely kept under the same roof as their owners, but 家 'pig under a roof' still means 'home'; villages are seldom made of wood these days, but the character for village 村 still has 木 wood/tree as its radical.

You may well ask: but how do we know how to pronounce these characters? The answer is we don't, at least not for sure in most cases. Unlike languages with an alphabet, Chinese characters do not directly indicate the pronunciation. However, you will find a brief guide to pronunciation at the back of the book starting on page 145.

Radical + phonetic

We have already looked at how the Chinese expanded their written vocabulary by putting two pictograms or two radicals together. The next most common method is what we may call the radical + phonetic method or phonogram, which we referred to earlier. The following examples are composed of two parts: a radical conveying meaning and a phonetic element. Although when standing alone, these phonetic elements carry meaning and may or may not be radicals, here they perform the function of indicating the sound to some extent. In the examples which follow, the phonetic or sound element does indicate the sound of the whole character, but this is the exception rather the rule. In most cases, characters with the same phonetic element are pronounced slightly differently and mostly in a different tone. (There are four tones in Modern Standard Chinese or Mandarin, seven in Cantonese. Our point of reference in this book is Modern Standard Chinese which is understood by about 70% of the Chinese population.)

You may notice in the following examples that the characters for 'far' and 'garden' share the same phonetic component. They do sound similar, although one is in the second tone indicated by ˊ and the other is in the third tone indicated by ˇ. Characters 'to accompany' and 'to blend' also share the same sound radical and they are pronounced exactly the same, with the same tone, in this case fourth ˋ.

Sound	Meaning	(Meaning) radical	Sound
远 yuǎn	far	辶 (to walk quickly)	元 (yuán)
碗 wǎn	bowl	石 (stone, mineral)	宛 (wǎn)
们 mén *	persons	人 (person)	门 (mén)
伴 bàn	to accompany	人 (person)	半 (bàn)
拌 bàn	to blend	扌 (hand)	半 (bàn)
订 dìng	to book	言 (speech)	丁 (dīng)
钉 dīng	nail	钅 (metal)	丁 (dīng)
锈 xiù	rusty	钅 (metal)	秀 (xiù)
吐 tǔ	to spit	口 (mouth)	土 (tǔ)
园 yuán	garden	口 (enclosure)	元 (yuán)
房 fáng	house	户 (household)	方 (fāng)
骑 qí *	to ride (a horse)	马 (horse)	奇 (qí)

* Check the pronunciation at the back of the book. It is not the same as in English.

By looking at the position of the radicals in the examples in this section and in characters or references earlier in the unit, you should be able to do the next two exercises.

Exercise 4

In each of the characters that follow, the radical is missing. (We have written it in the first column for you.) Where does it go? On the top, on the bottom, on the left-hand side or on the right-hand side?

Radicals

- | | | | |
|---------------|------------|-------------|------------------|
| 1 马 (horse) | 累 (mule) | 户 (donkey) | 句 (pony) |
| 2 艹 (grass) | 化 (flower) | 早 (grass) | 牙 (sprouts) |
| 3 钅 (metal) | 冈 (steel) | 秀 (rusty) | 令 (bell) |
| 4 辶 (to walk) | 兆 (escape) | 寸 (to pass) | 万 (to step over) |

Exercise 5

Which character is right? Circle the correct one.

- | | | | |
|------------|-------|---------|-------|
| 1 to hit | 仃 打 订 | 2 stove | 灶 杜 吐 |
| 3 to scorn | 饥 机 讥 | 4 snow | 雪 扫 灵 |

Let's summarize the radicals you have seen in these first two units. More radicals will be introduced in Units 3-5. A complete table of radicals will be found in the reference section at the back of the book.

车 vehicle	鱼 fish	木 tree	水 氵 water
宀 roof	大 big	毛 hair, fur	人 亻 person
雨 rain	子 child	土 earth	心 忄 heart
田 field	力 strength	羊 sheep	言 讠 speech
石 stone	日 sun	女 woman	草 艹 grass
辶 walk (quickly)	月 moon	小 small	火 灬 fire
豕 pig	舌 tongue	马 horse	竹 𦰩 bamboo
户 household	口 enclosure	工 work	手 扌 hand
山 mountain	口 mouth		金 钅 metal

Exercise 6

Can you recognize the character according to the following description? Please give what you think is the meaning of each character. We have done one for you.

- | | | |
|-----------------------------------|---|------------------|
| 1 an eye with water | 林 | _____ |
| 2 two trees next to each other | 灾 | _____ |
| 3 bamboo with fur/hair underneath | 囚 | _____ |
| 4 a person in an enclosure | 从 | to follow |
| 5 fire under roof | 泪 | _____ |
| 6 two people next to each other | 笔 | _____ |

Exercise 7

Can you identify the meaning of the following characters with the help of their radicals? Again, we have done one for you. Refer back to the table of radicals to help you.

墙	to throw	吻	she
扔	wall	椅	warm
怕	sweat	暖	kiss
汗	fear	她	chair

Now it's your turn to write Chinese characters! Where do we begin? As you can imagine, there are some basic rules for writing Chinese characters which you need to master. This is important if you are to remember them accurately. Chinese characters should always be written the same way so that they become fixed in your memory. We have seen how most characters are made up of two or more components or structural parts, although some of these components such as 月 yuè (moon), 日 rì (sun) can stand by themselves, as we have mentioned earlier. Although the total number of characters is quite large, the number of components which go to make up these characters is very limited. These components are written with a number of basic strokes, which are illustrated as follows.

Stroke	Name
丶	diǎn dot
一	héng horizontal
丨	shù vertical
丿	piě left-falling
㇇	nà right-falling
㇏	tí rising
㇇㇇㇇	gōu hook
㇇	zhé turning

These strokes are basically straight lines and were traditionally written in ink with a hair brush. The main directions are from top to bottom and from left to right. In the basic strokes that follow, the arrows show how the characters are written by indicating the direction each stroke takes.

03 writing Chinese characters

- In this unit you will learn
- some basic strokes
 - stroke order when writing characters
 - a dozen more characters/ radicals

The rules of stroke order in writing Chinese characters and character components are as follows.

Example	Stroke order	Rule
十	一 十	First horizontal, then vertical
人	丿 人	First left-falling, then right-falling
三	一 三	From top to bottom
州	丶 州 州 州	From left to right
月	丿 月 月 月	First outside, then inside
四	丨 四 四 四 四	Finish inside, then close
小	丨 小 小	Middle, then the two sides

Let's go back to the table of radicals in Unit 2 and identify some of these basic strokes. Take the radical 工 for instance; it is made up of two horizontal and one vertical strokes. The rule is that you do the horizontal first, then the vertical and, working from top to bottom, you do the second horizontal last, so you write it like this:

→ 工

小

士: first horizontal, then vertical and from top to bottom:

→ 士

口 is an interesting case. When writing what amounts to a box, this part of the box 凵 is done in one stroke, but this part 凵 is done as two strokes. This is all to do with what is and is not possible to do with a hair brush without dripping and what looks aesthetically pleasing. So, 口 is written:

口

日 is very similar in its stroke order but also follows the finish inside, then close rule:

日

月 follows the first outside, then inside rule:

月

Exercise 1

Try working out the stroke order of the following eight characters and writing them in the gaps provided. (The number of gaps indicates the number of strokes required.) Writing small characters needs a lot of practice so we recommend that initially you use a separate sheet for this and subsequent exercises.

- 人 人
- 田 田
- 大 大
- 木 木
- 心 心
- 山 山
- ↑ ↑ or 心
- 言 言

How did you get on? Check your answers in the Key to the exercises.

We're going to help you with the next ones to make sure you understand the stroke order correctly.

車 follows the basic rules, first horizontal, then vertical and from top to bottom, but there is an additional point to remember. When the vertical goes through the horizontal(s), it (the vertical) is done last:

車

By the way, 車 is a full character, the simplified character is 车 – much simpler, isn't it?

羊 also follows this rule:

丩 丩 丩 丩 丩 羊

毛 and 舌 both start with the same stroke 丩, which was the second stroke in 羊 above:

毛 丩 丩 丩 毛

舌 丩 丩 丩 舌

力 is written 丩 力.

女 is an interesting character. It originally came from the picture of a woman in a traditional, respectful position with her arms crossed over her stomach:

女 → 女 女

子, whose origins we looked at in Unit 1, is written as follows: 子. When used as a radical on the left-hand side, the last stroke is not horizontal but rising. Nevertheless, it moves in the same direction as the horizontal.

扌 has both these strokes in it:

扌 扌

Have a go at the next six yourself. Each line represents one stroke. They're a little trickier than the ones you did before so we'll give you a little help now and again:

雨 雨 雨 雨 雨 雨
 鱼 鱼 鱼 鱼 鱼 鱼

匕 is in fact the radical 刀 dāo (knife) but is made much smaller and more stylized when it appears on the top of a character as it does here.

豕 豕 豕 豕 豕 豕
 竹 竹 竹 竹 竹 竹 马 马 马 马 马 马

is written as one stroke, as is 与

艹 only appears as 竹 when it actually means 'bamboo', but as the meaning or radical for other characters, it is written 艹, which is, fortunately, much simpler! The same is true for the 'grass' radical. It is 草 when written on its own and means 'grass' but is written as 艹 (一 艹 艹) when it is acting as a radical.

You may need some help with the last ones: 火 can either be written 丩 火 (left to right rule), or 丩 火 (top to bottom rule). 灬 is, of course, written 灬 灬 灬.

辶 counts as three strokes: 辶 and is always written last no matter where it occurs in the character. This is probably because its last stroke finishes up right at the bottom of the character.

Exercise 2

Let's do some more practice on the basic strokes you have learnt in this unit. In the table are five of these. Circle the stroke illustrated in the column on the left in each of the characters which follow. We have done one for you to show you what is required.

丩	小	材	少	尘	你
丩	心	言	家	米	兴
丩	打	河	冰	牲	跑
丩	力	长	火	户	石
丩	大	舌	草	鱼	马

国 also illustrates a refinement to the basic rule, first horizontal then vertical. As you have seen, the vertical stroke is done before the last horizontal one, i.e. 干王 and not 三王. Remember that the vertical is done last when it goes through the last horizontal but not when it just touches it, so 三丰 but 干王.

Exercise 5

What is wrong with the following characters? (You have met them all in their correct form.)

A	B	C	D	E	F	G	H
彳	明	亻	木	男	宀	冂	泪
草

Now for some more radicals. In Unit 2, we introduced the concept of radicals. Do you remember what a radical is?

Exercise 6

What is a radical? Is it a:

- stroke in a character
- character component
- simple character?

We have seen how most Chinese characters are made up of two components – a radical and a phonetic. Radicals may be helpful in identifying the general area of meaning of the character but this is not always apparent. However, the radical will always help us find a particular character in a dictionary and hence its actual meaning (see Unit 10). For that reason, we need to learn as many of them as we can.

Exercise 7

What do these radicals mean? Can you infer their meanings from the translations given for each of the characters?

				Meaning
1 目:	眼 eye	盯 to stare	瞎 blind	眨 to blink
2 犴:	狗 dog	狼 wolf	猫 cat	狐 fox
3 饣:	饱 full up	饭 meal	饼 pancake	馅 stuffing
4 钅:	刻 to carve	刹 to chop	割 to cut	刺 to pierce
5 山:	峰 peak	岭 hill	崖 cliff	岗 hill

Exercise 8

Can you identify the radicals in the following characters? Write down the radical of each character in the space provided and say what the character might be to do with. Then check the Key to the exercises to see if you got them right.

Example:

Character	Radical	Might have something to do with
话	言(讠)	speech
1 枫	_____	2 讽	_____	3 峰	_____
4 海	_____	5 晚	_____	6 煮	_____
7 资	_____	8 烧	_____	9 笔	_____
10 刻	_____

Exercise 9

Here are more radicals for you to remember (some have already appeared in this unit):

Radical	Pinyin	Meaning	Radical	Pinyin	Meaning
刂(刀)	dāo	knife	石	shí	stone, mineral
饣(食)	shí	food	口	kǒu	mouth
目	mù	eye	贝	bèi	shell
氵(水)	shuǐ	water	见	jiàn	to see

Try working out the stroke order for each of them and then check it in the Key to the exercises. We have deliberately put 贝 bèi, 见 jiàn and 页 yè together to show you how similar they are in one sense and how different they are in meaning. It may help you to think of 贝 bèi as being written with 'straight' legs, whereas 见 jiàn is written with one 'curly' one. 页 yè is just like 贝 bèi but it has 冫 on top of it.

We have already noted that many radicals are to be found in the same position in any of the characters in which they occur. Look at the position of the various radicals in Exercises 7 and 8 and then do Exercise 10.

Exercise 10

Where does the radical normally go?

- | | |
|-----------------|---------------------------|
| 1 马 horse | the left-hand side |
| 2 艹 grass/plant | _____ |
| 3 犹 animal | _____ |
| 4 讠 speech | _____ |
| 5 火 fire | _____ |
| 6 竹 bamboo | _____ |
| 7 氵 water | _____ |
| 8 刀 knife | _____ |
| 9 亻 person | _____ |
| 10 口 mouth | _____ |

Exercise 11

Can you write the character according to the following description? Please guess or give the meaning of the character if you can.

Description	Character	Meaning
1 Water (left) in an eye (right)	_____	_____
2 Two trees next to each other	_____	_____
3 Bamboo with fur/hair underneath	_____	_____
4 A person in an enclosure	_____	_____
5 Fire under roof	_____	_____
6 Small (top) earth (bottom)	_____	_____
7 Sun (top) above light (光)	_____	_____

Exercise 12

Group together all the characters that have the same radical. Number the groups from 1 to 9 (there are nine groups altogether). What does the radical in each group mean? (The answers will be in the Key to the exercises, but not necessarily in the order you have given them. When you have studied Unit 10, you should be able to look up the characters you don't know in a Chinese-English dictionary.)

泪 1	昨 _____	吃 _____	林 _____	推 _____	叮 _____
诗 _____	饭 _____	汗 1	时 _____	贵 _____	材 _____
杂 _____	货 _____	饺 _____	喝 _____	河 1	扣 _____
别 _____	刚 _____	贡 _____	词 _____	晚 _____	饿 _____
打 _____	吸 _____	说 _____	根 _____	刷 _____	订 _____

- | | | |
|----------------|---------|---------|
| 1 water | 2 _____ | 3 _____ |
| 4 _____ | 5 _____ | 6 _____ |
| 7 _____ | 8 _____ | 9 _____ |

Exercise 13

How many strokes are there in these characters? They may be new to you. Do not worry about their meanings. See if you can identify the number of strokes in each character. Check the Key to the exercises, where the strokes of these characters are illustrated (cf. how to use a Chinese dictionary in Unit 10).

方 山 九 足 去 气 尺 风

i 学写字 Learning to write

A Chinese child started to learn writing on his first day with his teacher. The teacher began by showing him how to write 一, the character for 'one'. The child said to himself: 'That was easy.' Then the teacher taught him to write 二, the character for 'two'. Seeing how easy it was to do 'two', the child became restless. Then he was shown how to write 三, the character for 'three'. Before he was asked to write it, he shouted in protest: 'I know how to write now!' The teacher said to him: 'You are a quick learner. So much for the lesson. Your homework for today is to write the character for "ten thousand".'

The character for ten thousand is 万 (full form 萬).

how words are formed

In this unit you will learn

- various ways in which words are composed
- about the Chinese language in general (including its pronunciation)
- numbers, basic calculations, years in Chinese
- tips for learning characters

In Units 1-3, we saw how radicals and a radical and a phonetic component are combined to form new characters. In this unit we shall see how single characters are combined to form words. You have seen some of the characters in the first three units.

Let us look first at a few examples. The characters in Column A combine with those in Column B to form the words in Column C. Cover up the English next to the Chinese words in Column C and see if you can work out the meanings for yourself.

Column A	Column B	Column C
人 person	口 mouth	人口 population
入 to enter	口	入口 entrance
天 heaven/sky	子 child	天子 emperor
王 king	子	王子 prince
工 work	人 person	工人 worker
大 big	人	大人 adult; used in ancient times when addressing a person with status (and honour), e.g. a judge in the imperial court
小 small	人	小人 a dishonourable or small-minded person (not child/children)

These words are reasonably obvious. The next ones are not.

Exercise 1

What do you think the following mean? Check the Key to the exercises for the answers.

Column A	Column B	Column C	Meaning
1 小 small	心 heart/mind	小心	_____
2 放 put down	心	放心	_____
3 瞎 blind	话 speech	瞎话	_____
4 笑 laugh	话	笑话	_____

Combining characters

There are different ways of combining single characters to form two-character words or even three- and four-character words. Here are some examples.

Noun + noun

电 electric(ity) + 话 speech = 电话 telephone

天 day, sky + 气 air = 天气 weather

NB: Both 天 and 气 are radicals in their own right.

Exercise 2

			Meaning
1 火 fire	车 vehicle	火车	_____
2 木 wood	工 worker	木工	_____
3 月 moon	票 ticket	月票	_____
4 电 electric(ity)	视 vision	电视	_____
5 电	车 vehicle	电车	_____
6 电	影 shadow	电影	_____
7 电	脑 brain	电脑	_____

Adjective* + verb

好 good + 听 to listen = 好听 pleasant to listen to

难 hard, difficult + 吃 to eat = 难吃 awful (food)

* Adjectives in Chinese can also function as verbs, so 好 hǎo means 'to be good' as well as 'good'. Some people call such adjectives 'stative verbs' when they function in this way.

Exercise 3

		Meaning
1 好 + 吃	好吃	_____
2 难 + 听	难听	_____
3 好 + 看 to look at	好看	_____
4 难 + 看	难看	_____

Adjective + noun

小 small + 学 study = 小学 primary school

公 public + 园 enclosure = 公园 park

Exercise 4

- 1 大 big 学 study
2 小 small 费 fee
3 好 good 心 heart; mind

大学 小费 好心

Meaning

Exercise 5

公 public + 平 level = 公平

Does it mean:

- a to be fair; justice
b scales
c flat road?

明 bright + 天 day, sky = 明天

Does it mean:

- a yesterday
b today c tomorrow?

Verb + verb

听 to listen + 说 to speak = 听说 to hear someone say

听 to listen + 懂 to understand = 听懂 to understand (through listening)

看 to look at + 懂 to understand = 看懂 to understand (through reading)

看 to look at + 见 to see = 看见 to have perceived by seeing (to have seen)

听 to listen + 见 to see = 听见 to have perceived by hearing (to have heard)

Verb + object

开 to start + 车 vehicle = 开车 to drive (a vehicle)

念 to read aloud + 书 book = 念书 to study

Exercise 6

What do you think the following verb-objects mean?

			Meaning
1 吃	to eat	饭 cooked rice	吃饭 _____
2 教	to teach	书 book	教书 _____
3 录	to record	音 sound	录音 _____
4 走	to walk	路 road	走路 _____
5 说	to speak	话 speech	说话 _____

As you can see from the last exercise, Chinese uses an object where you would not normally find one in English. Thus the English 'to eat' becomes 吃饭 'to eat cooked rice' in Chinese. This is because classical Chinese was monosyllabic (one-syllabled), whereas modern Chinese has become increasingly disyllabic (two-syllabled): the verb-object construction can be seen as conforming to the disyllabic trend. Using the 'fill-in' object also produces a more balanced sentence from the Chinese point of view. Of course, if the verb has a 'proper' object then the 'fill-in' object is discarded, e.g. 他 (he) 吃鱼 (eats fish) (where 'fish' is the object).

Duplicates for plurals

Do you remember what 人 means? Yes, it is 'person'. What then do you think 人人 means? It means 'everybody'. Logical, isn't it? When some words are repeated, the meaning is 'every' plus the noun in question. But not all nouns work in this way. Let us look at some more examples:

天: day	天天	every day
月: month	月月	every month
年: year	年年	every year
代: generation	代代	every generation

How to write the numbers 1 to 10

Let's try writing the numbers 1 to 10.

一	二*	三	四	五	六	七	八	九	十*
yī	èr	sān	sì	wǔ	liù	qī	bā	jiǔ	shí

* 二 and 十 are both radicals in their own right.

Stroke order: points to remember

- Remember that horizontal lines are done from left to right.
- From top to bottom. (三) 一 二 三
- Finish what is inside the box before closing the box. (四) 丨 冂 凵 四 四
- Horizontal before vertical. (五) 一 丁 五 五
- Left falling before right falling. (六) 丿 六 六
- 乙 counts as one stroke. (九) 丿 九 Some people write it as 乚 九. The important thing is for you to always write it the same way.

i Pronunciation and the Chinese script

This book is about the Chinese script, so we have decided not to spend a lot of time (and space) explaining the pronunciation to you. Please refer to Teach Yourself Chinese and Teach Yourself Beginner's Chinese if you want to learn to speak Chinese. In any case, spoken Chinese comes in many different dialects, the difference between many of them being greater than the difference between, say, English and German or Portuguese and Italian.

The Chinese script, however, remains the same for all of these dialects, the only difference being that since the People's Republic of China came into being in 1949, the government has simplified a number of common characters (well over 2,000) in an attempt to raise literacy levels in China. Until then, characters had remained virtually unchanged for about 2,000 years. Officially, Taiwan and Hong Kong do not use these simplified characters but some are used unofficially, for example when people write to one another and so on. Singapore has adopted the simplified system.

The dialect whose pronunciation system is adopted in this book, as well as in Teach Yourself Chinese and Teach Yourself Beginner's Chinese, is called pǔtōnghuà 普通话 'common speech'. It is sometimes referred to in the West as Modern Standard Chinese or Mandarin. More than 70% of Chinese people in the People's Republic of China speak some form of this dialect. It is also the official Chinese language or dialect in Taiwan and Singapore, where it is known as guóyǔ 国语 'national language' and huáyǔ 华语 'Chinese (old word) language' respectively.

How to write the numbers 11 to 99

Once you have learned the numbers 1 to 10, you will be able to read and write 11 to 99.

11 is 10 + 1 = 十一
 12 is 10 + 2 = 十二
 19 is 10 + 9 = 十九
 20 is 2 × 10 = 二十
 30 is 3 × 10 = 三十

41 is 4 × 10 + 1 = 四十一
 52 is 5 × 10 + 2 = 五十二
 87 is 8 × 10 + 7 = 八十七
 99 is 9 × 10 + 9 = 九十九

Exercise 7

What numbers do the following characters represent?

- | | | |
|-----|------|-------|
| a 四 | e 九 | i 三十五 |
| b 八 | f 六 | j 九十四 |
| c 五 | g 十 | k 七十六 |
| d 七 | h 十八 | l 五十九 |

Exercise 8

Try writing out the following numbers in Chinese characters. Don't forget your stroke order rules (cf. page 16). You can use the squared paper provided on page 26. This will help you to keep the characters the same size and with the correct spacing.

- | | | | | | |
|------|-----|-----|------|------|------|
| a 8 | c 7 | e 6 | g 4 | i 32 | k 65 |
| b 10 | d 5 | f 9 | h 21 | j 87 | l 94 |

Numbers in lists

Although Arabic numbers are widely used in documents and newspaper articles, this traditional form of written numbers is still commonly used. In English, people use A, B, C, D for listing points. In Chinese, people tend to use 一 二 三 四 for the same purpose. 第 in front of a number makes it into an ordinal (or ranking) number like first, ninth, etc. 第 has bamboo on top and the phonetic di underneath. It is written:

第: 𠄎 𠄎 𠄎 𠄎 𠄎 𠄎 𠄎
 弟: 𠄎 𠄎 𠄎 𠄎 𠄎 𠄎 𠄎

The equivalents to English first, second and third are 第(di)一, 第二, and 第三 and not 第1, 第2, and 第3.

How to write the years

It is very easy to write the years in Chinese. Each figure is treated as a single number. Thus 1998 is said and written as 一九九八 with the character for year 年 nián written after it. 年 is written: 一九九八年.

Exercise 9

What are the following years?

- | | |
|---------|--------|
| a 一九一九 | f 一九一四 |
| b 一九九一 | g 一四九二 |
| c 一九四五 | h 一八四八 |
| d 一〇*六六 | i 二〇一五 |
| e 一七八九 | |

* Zero is the exception to the rule that Chinese characters are commonly used for writing numbers. The character for zero 零 is quite complicated so 〇 has been widely adopted instead.

Exercise 10

Write out the following years in Chinese characters (you don't need to write 年 after each one):

a 1321	<table border="1" style="display: inline-table; vertical-align: middle;"><tr><td> </td><td> </td><td> </td><td> </td></tr><tr><td> </td><td> </td><td> </td><td> </td></tr><tr><td> </td><td> </td><td> </td><td> </td></tr><tr><td> </td><td> </td><td> </td><td> </td></tr><tr><td> </td><td> </td><td> </td><td> </td></tr></table>																					f 1486	<table border="1" style="display: inline-table; vertical-align: middle;"><tr><td> </td><td> </td><td> </td><td> </td></tr><tr><td> </td><td> </td><td> </td><td> </td></tr><tr><td> </td><td> </td><td> </td><td> </td></tr><tr><td> </td><td> </td><td> </td><td> </td></tr><tr><td> </td><td> </td><td> </td><td> </td></tr></table>
b 1932		g 1937
c 1876		h 1842
d 1965		i 2037
e 1949

How to write the date

We have already come across the characters for sun and moon. They are 日 and 月. Understandably 日 and 月 also represent day and month respectively. Now, can you understand what the following dates are?

- a 一月三日 b 十月八日 c 十二月二十五日

They are 3 January, 8 October and 25 December. This is really quite easy and completely logical but have you noticed that in Chinese, the month comes first? This is because the Chinese have a vertical rather than a linear concept of time and move from the general to the particular so the order is year, month, day, time of day (a.m./p.m.), hour, minute which is the exact reverse of the English word order.

It should be noted that, although in most informal writing people use Arabic numbers for dates, in most formal writing dates are still written in characters, as in the examples we have just seen.

Learning tip: making your own flash cards

You can make your own flash cards as you work your way through the book. It would be a good idea to go back to Unit 1 and make them for Units 1-3 as well, as they contain a lot of useful, basic vocabulary.

A flash card normally consists of the character or characters on one side and the English and/or romanization on the other. A good size for your flash card is 3 cm.

Character	Reverse side
火	fire huǒ
明	bright míng or bright (sun + moon)

You could also put on the reverse side how the character is made up (see above); this might help you to remember it more easily.

Having made your flash cards (and of course you keep adding to them as you learn new characters), you work through them looking at the character side first and seeing how many of them you recognize. Check your answers with the English on the back. Put the ones you get right on one side and then work your way through the ones you got wrong, repeating the process until you recognize them all.

Having gone through your flash cards 'recognizing' the characters, do it the other way round. Look at the side with the English and the explanation as to how the character is made up and try writing out the character itself. This is, of course, much harder! Check your answer with the character on the other side. Adopt the same system as before, putting aside the ones you get right and repeating the ones you get wrong.

You will probably need to do this many, many times before you have mastered them and, as you add new flash cards to the old ones, there is always more to be done.

Find a handy sized box to keep your cards in, so that you can work on them on the bus, train or underground or in any spare moments you might have. You will be interested to know that even very young Chinese children learn their basic characters in this way. They used to have pictures on the front and characters on the back. The pinyin might be on the front or the back. The latest ones for learning characters also have English on the back!

Below are examples of the type of flash card you can make yourself.

A1	B1	C1	D1
难	钱	星期	电话
A2	B2	C2	D2
nán	qián	xīngqī	diànhuà
difficult	money	week	telephone

E1	F1	G1	H1
学习	汉字	生词	卡片
E2	F2	G2	H2
xuéxí	hànzì	shēngcí	kǎpiàn
study	Chinese character	new words	card

Are you ready to read and write some more dates? Try the following exercises.

Exercise 11

Can you recognize the following dates?

- a 二月一日 d 四月十日 g 十一月二十六日 b 三月七日 e 六月二十日 h 十月十五日
 c 五月九日 f 八月三十日 i 十二月三十一日

Exercise 12

Match the English months with their Chinese equivalents. We have done the first one for you.

- | | | |
|------------|------------|-------------|
| a December | b April | c September |
| d June | e November | f May |
| g July | h October | i August |
- | | | |
|-------|------|-------|
| 1 十一月 | 2 六月 | 3 八月 |
| 4 九月 | 5 七月 | 6 十二月 |
| 7 十月 | 8 四月 | 9 五月 |

Example: a December = 6 十二月

Exercise 13

Can you write out the following dates in Chinese characters?

- New Year's Day (1st January)
- St George's Day (23rd March)
- American Independence Day (4th July)
- Christmas Day (25th December)
- Summer Solstice (21st June)

Exercise 14

The cartoon depicts a man giving his wife flowers for International Women's Day. What is the date of this special day?

How to write the days of the week

All you need to know to write the characters for the days of the week are the two characters 星 xīng (star) and 期 qī (period) which, when combined together, form the word for 'week'; plus the numbers 1 to 6 and the characters for 'sun' 日 (rì) or 'day' 天 (tiān). 星 xīng is made up of the radical 日 rì (sun) and 生 shēng (to give birth).

We have given you the correct stroke order in the boxes:

日	丨	冂	日	日
生	丿	乚	乚	牛	生

> 星

期 qī is made up of the phonetic element 其 qí (its) and the radical 月 yuè (moon).

其	一	十	廿	廿	廿	卅	其	其
月	丿	月	月	月

> 期

Practise writing the days of the week on your own. You have already met 日 rì (sun) and 天 tiān (day).

Exercise 15

Match the Chinese with their English equivalents.

- | | |
|-------|-------------|
| a 星期三 | 1 Monday |
| b 星期六 | 2 Tuesday |
| c 星期一 | 3 Wednesday |
| d 星期日 | 4 Thursday |
| e 星期二 | 5 Friday |
| f 星期五 | 6 Saturday |
| g 星期四 | 7 Sunday |

Exercise 16

Write the missing character in the space which gives you the correct day in answer to the following questions:

Example:

Which day comes two days before Thursday? 星期二

a On which day do Muslims go to the mosque? 星期__

b On which day do Christians go to church? 星期__

c Which day do Jewish people go to the synagogue? 星期__

Mini-test 1

You may find some of the exercises in the mini-test quite challenging. You may like to return to them after you have finished the book. Hopefully you will be amazed by the progress you have made.

Exercise 1

We have learned that in many characters there is one component which indicates the pronunciation. That component is called the sound component. Now that you have learned a number of meaning radicals, see if you can match the characters with their respective meaning in the following exercise. These characters sound very similar because they all share the same sound component 青 qing. Put the appropriate number in the brackets. We have done one for you. (The one with the radical you don't recognize will be the character for 'cyanogen'!)

- | | | |
|-----|-------------|----------------------|
| 1 情 | qíng | a to ask, to request |
| 2 清 | qīng | b dragonfly |
| 3 晴 | qíng | c bright/sunny day |
| 4 请 | qǐng | d feeling |
| 5 蜻 | qīng | e cyanogen (a gas) |
| 6 晴 | qíng | f mackerel |
| 7 氰 | qíng | g clear |
- 2 = g

Exercise 2

Identify the Chinese phrases and match up the correct number with the English translation. We have done one for you.

- | | |
|---------|----------------------------|
| 1 人民大会堂 | a People's Square |
| 2 人民币 | b People's Park |
| 3 人民日报 | c Great Hall of the People |
| 4 人民公园 | d People's Daily |
| 5 人民广场 | e Chinese currency |

2 = e

Exercise 3

What do you think the following words mean? Do they mean a, b or c? Circle what you think is the correct answer. (The dictionary definition of each individual character is provided.)

- | | | | |
|------|--------------------------------|---------------------------------------|-----------------|
| 1 生日 | a sunrise
生 to be born; raw | b birthday
日 sun; day | c early morning |
| 2 早安 | a dawn
早 early | b settlement
安 peace; put in place | c good morning |
| 3 日历 | a diary
日 sun; day | b calendar
历 history | c rainbow |

Exercise 4

Try and fill in the missing characters in the captions above the picture. We have tried to help you by giving you the basic meaning of each of the characters you will need to use. 午 occurs more than once.

上 above, previous	早 early	晚 late
下 below, next	午 noon	中 middle

Exercise 5

Guess what the caption below the cartoon means. You have already met the word 公平 earlier in this chapter. Can you find it again? (不 bù means 'not' and is put in front of all verbs except 有 yǒu (to have) to negate them.)

不公平

Which side of the shop window is menswear?

Exercise 6

Some characters occur as part of many different words. 中 (middle) and 火 (fire) are good examples of this. What do you think the following words mean? For each word, choose what you think is the correct translation from the box on the right.

中学 中国 中心 中午

Chinese newspaper China secondary school

b

火腿 (leg) 火山 火车 火箭 (arrow) 火花

i 风 wind + 水 water = 风水 wind and water?

风水 fēngshuǐ actually means geomancy. This early Chinese belief (and one which is still held by many Chinese throughout the world) holds that the spirits of land, water and wind play an active part in human affairs. Thus, the location and the direction in which a house or tomb faces, and even the position of the windows and furniture within the home, are of the utmost importance. They determine the fortunes of the family which occupies the house or of the relatives of the dead person. Tombs, for example, should face south with protecting hills behind them and a river or stream nearby so that good luck can flow to the family of the deceased.

The idea behind this is that people are part of the natural order; therefore, where they build their dwellings or graves must harmonize with the forces that exist in nature. Even some businesses (including non-Chinese ones) take 风水 into account when deciding on the height and exact location of their premises in an attempt to cut off the flow of good luck to their competitors. This is achieved by such measures as blocking out the sunlight to their offices and/or casting a shadow on them.

I told you the fengshui here was no good.

我说过这儿的風水不好。

Exercise 7

What is the radical for the following words? (2) means you should try to write the two versions of the radical.

- | | | |
|---------|------------|-----------------------|
| a mouth | b rain | c fire (2) |
| d page | e wind | f knife (2) |
| g rice | h child | i metal (2) |
| j eye | k horse | l speech (2) |
| m big | n field | o heart (2) |
| p woman | q mountain | r step with left foot |
| s door | t to walk | |

Finally, here are fourteen more radicals for you to learn – you've come across half of them already:

Radical	Pinyin	Meaning	Radical	Pinyin	Meaning
八 or 丷	bā	eight	纟	sī	silk
天	tiān	day, heaven	衣 (衤)	yī	clothing
王	wáng	king	冰 (冫)	bīng	ice
门	mén	door	禾	hé	grain, plant
风	fēng	wind	穴	xué	cave, hole
虫	chóng	insect	气	qì	air
广	guǎng	covering, roof	犴	quǎn	(wild) animal, dog

The stroke order for these is fairly straightforward:

八 丷 八 or 丷
 天 一 二 三 天
 王 一 二 三 王
 门 一 二 门
 风 一 二 风 风
 虫 一 二 三 虫 虫
 广 一 二 广
 纟 一 二 三
 衣 一 二 三 衣 衣 衣

衤 一 二 衤 衤 衤 冫 一 二
 冰 一 二 三 冰 冰 冰
 禾 一 二 禾 禾 禾
 穴 一 二 三 穴 穴
 气 一 二 三 气
 犴 一 二 三

Note the difference between 禾 grain and 天 day. In 禾 the first stroke is sloping 一 but it is horizontal 一 in 天.

95 signs (1)

In this unit you will learn

- practical signs in e.g. hotels and restaurants
- some common Western names in Chinese characters
- country names in Chinese characters
- how to tell the time in Chinese

From this unit on, we are going to take you through your business trip to China. You are attending a conference in Beijing, and will do some sightseeing and shopping.

饭店

生词 Shēngcí New words

The radical for each character is shown in brackets after it.

北京	Běijīng	Beijing
北	north	(丨 or 匕)
京	capital	(宀)
饭店	fàndiàn	hotel; restaurant
饭	rice, meal	(饣)
店	shop	(广)
楼梯	lóutī	stairs
楼	building	(木)
梯	stairs	(木)
服务台	fúwùtái	reception
服务	to serve; service	(月力)

服务员	fúwùyuán	attendant
员	person	(口)
欢迎	huānyíng	to welcome
欢	joyfully	(又)
迎	to greet	(辶)

Exercise 1

- a Identify the new radicals (i.e. ones you haven't met in Units 1-4) in the new words in the list and write them in the spaces provided.

Radical Meaning

- b i What is the radical of 饭? _____
 ii What is the radical of 楼? _____
 iii What other two radicals (acting as the phonetic) occur on the right-hand side of 楼? _____
 iv What is the component below 迎 in 员? _____
 v Give the stroke order for 迎. _____
- c Give the stroke order for 梯 (rather tricky). You had 弟 in Unit 4.
 木 _____ (梯)
 弟 dì means younger brother and is normally reduplicated i.e. 弟弟 as are 爸爸* bàba (dad), 妈妈 māma (mum), 姐姐 jiějie (elder sister) and 哥哥 gēge (elder brother), 妹妹 mèimei (younger sister).
- d What is the radical for 妈妈? For 姐姐? For 哥哥? For 妹妹?
 *父 fù is another new radical, meaning 'father' or elderly male person.

Exercise 2

What do you think the following Chinese words mean?

- 电梯 (bottom right corner in the picture on p. 47)
 店员 (cf. 服务员) 服务楼 电台 (cf. 服务台)

i The first floor in China is the ground floor in Britain, and the second floor in China is the first floor in Britain, and so on. America uses the same system as China.

Exercise 3

Having settled down in your hotel room, you decide to have some lunch. There are two restaurants in the hotel. Follow the sign 餐厅 (canteen or restaurant) and you see a 服务员 giving you directions. You have a choice of two restaurants, Cantonese (Guǎngdōng) or Sichuan. Which is which?

A: _____

B: _____

By the way, there is a sign on the left-hand column in the picture above (禁止吸烟) asking you not to do something. (Check on page 13, Unit 2, to see what the radicals 口 and 火 mean. This will help you.) Is it asking you:

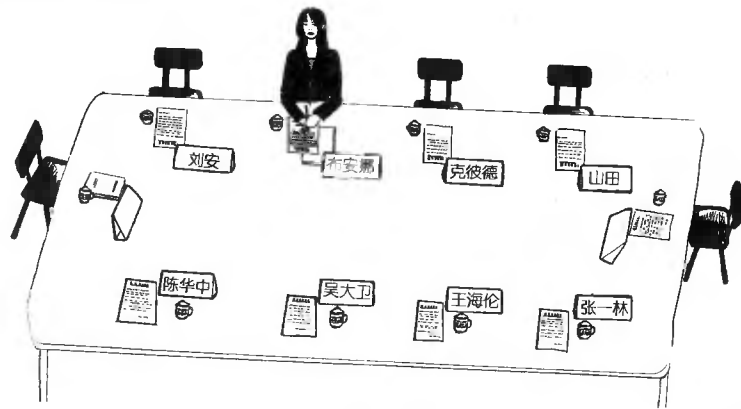

- i not to take photographs iii not to dump litter ii not to smoke iv not to enter

Now look at the hotel floor map below. Can you find where the toilets are? Do you remember 男 nán and 女 nǚ introduced in Unit 2? Yes, they are 'man' and 'woman'. The Chinese for 'toilet' is 厕所 cèsuǒ.

There is one more new word on the map. It is in the top right-hand corner. You will come across it again soon. But look at the radical of the first character and you may have an idea what it is.

At the conference

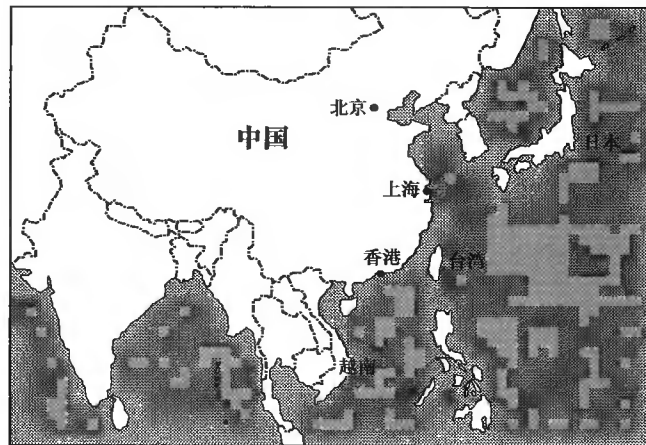

It is time for the conference to begin. If your name is 王海伦, where will you sit?

Common Chinese surnames include:

张 王 李 赵 刘 陈 林 吴 郭 郑
 Zhāng Wáng Lǐ Zhào Liú Chén Lín Wú Guō Zhèng

Note: They do not all appear in the illustration, but 王海伦 will sit third from the left at the bottom of the picture.

i These ten surnames are among the most common in China. While Zhao, Liu, Wu are purely for people's names and place names, Zhang, Wang, Li, Lin, Guo, Chen and Zheng have other meanings. As you already know, 林 lín is 'forest' and 王 wáng is 'king'. 张 zhāng means 'to stretch', and 李 lǐ is 'plum'.

德	virtue	Dé sounds similar to the first syllable of 'Deutschland'

Exercise 4

Match the participants with their nationalities.

- Who is from Japan?
- Where is 吴大卫 from?
- Is Ms Wang/King from China?
- Which country does Ms Li represent?
- Is there anybody from Germany?
- What is the surname of the Hong Kong participant?

i Translation of English names

English names, or any foreign names for that matter, are translated into Chinese mainly according to what they sound like to the Chinese ear. Chinese characters which sound similar are used to represent the sound. The table that follows gives some examples of this.

Another way of creating a Chinese name is to choose a character for one's surname and one or two characters for one's given name. (In Chinese the surname or family name should come first, followed by one's given name and finally one's title, when used.) The characters in one's Chinese name should ideally be close, in terms of sound or meaning, to the non-Chinese name. The surname, of course, should come first, and the first name should be second to make it resemble a Chinese name.

Exercise 5

Your Chinese friends have told you what their names mean. Can you write down their names in characters?

- A 'My surname is Liu. My given name is Guo'an. "Guo" means "country" and "an" means "peace".' _____
 B 'Mum and Dad gave me the name of "big bright". They obviously hoped that I would be a star.' _____
 C 'My given name is Yinglin. "Ying" means "hero" while "lin" means "forest".' _____
 D 'Because I was born in Beijing, I am called Jingsheng, literally meaning "capital-born".' _____

How to write the time

In Unit 4, we learned the Chinese characters for dates. Now let's look at time. Look at the pictures of the clocks and the Chinese characters below, and work out what characters mean hour (as on the clock), minute, a quarter (of an hour) and half (of an hour). Circle one example of each (character) in the times given in the Chinese below.

两*点半 三点一刻 三点五十五 五点四十五
 两点三十分 三点十五分 差五分四点 五点三刻

* Note that 两 liǎng (two) is used where there are two of a kind, instead of 二 èr.

The five new words used for expressing time are:

点 diǎn o'clock 分 fēn minute 刻 kè a quarter
 半 bàn half 差 chā lack; missing

Did you get them right? Let's take a closer look at these characters and see if we can find a way of remembering them.

点 has the fire radical underneath. It also means to 'light a fire'. When it got dark, people would light a candle, hence the character has to do with time. The classical or complicated character for 点 is 點, which has 'dark' or 'black' on the left side. 分 means 'to divide', as expressed by a 刀 (knife), which is the bottom radical of 分. The character then means 'division', and was later used to represent a division of time. It is also used to represent the smallest unit of Chinese money. The right-hand side of 刻 is also a knife. It is called a 'vertical knife' or a 'standing knife'. 刻 means 'to carve or engrave', and as a noun it refers to a short period of time. 半, meaning 'half', is straightforward: a line cutting through the middle breaking it into two equal parts. 差 is made up of the radical for sheep 羊 yáng (slanted here) and the phonetic element 工 gōng. No help here for pronunciation, unfortunately.

Although Arabic numerals are widely used in China when expressing numbers, traditional characters like 八、九、十, are still used everywhere, especially in a formal context, such as the dates in a document as well as the times on a sign indicating the opening hours of a shop.

Exercise 6

What are the opening hours of the following places?

- a 中国银行 九点 --- 十七点
 b 森林餐厅 早七点 --- 晚十一点
 c 邮电局 八点半 --- 十九点
 d 办公室 上午八点 --- 十二点
 下午两点 --- 六点

Exercise 7

Now for some quick revision. What are the radicals of these characters? (Try not to refer to the explanations given earlier.)

- a 分 _____
 b 刻 _____
 c 半 _____
 d 钟 (钟 zhōng means 'clock') _____ e 差 _____

Exercise 8

Write in characters the time on each of the clocks:

Revision exercise

Let's revise the radicals we have already learnt by recognizing them in some of the characters we have met so far. Group together all the characters that have the same radical (there are ten radicals in all). List all ten radicals below the box. Try and remember what each character means. You can check your answers in the Key to the exercises.

Time for some sightseeing

The conference is over. You decide to go to 香山公园, a beautiful park in the western suburbs of Beijing. You can travel either by 出租汽车 (taxi) or by 公共汽车 (bus). You may notice that both 'taxi' and 'bus' contain the word 汽车, which in fact means 'vehicle'.

出租汽车 (chūzūqìchē) taxi

出租 for rent or hire

- 出 out

- 租 rent; to rent

汽车 vehicle

- 汽 steam, gas

- 车 vehicle

公共汽车 (gōnggòngqìchē) bus

公共 public

- 公 public

- 共 common; to share

Now would you be able to follow the sign and go to the right place to get on a bus or a taxi?

出租汽车站

公共汽车站

(开往香山)

i The word for 'bus' is different depending on where you are. It is 公共汽车, or 汽车 for short, in the People's Republic of China. It is called 公车 (still a public vehicle as the characters suggest) in Taiwan. In Hong Kong, where Cantonese is spoken, a bus is called 'bāshi', which is in fact how the locals pronounce 'bus'. The characters for 'bāshi' are 巴士, which do not mean anything but represent the sound only. 巴士, however, is being increasingly used in China, especially in Guangdong Province (Canton).

At the park entrance, you see a map of the park. You should be able to identify the places on the map. If you are not sure of any of them, just examine the radical(s) of the words carefully.

香山公园

You are here

Exercise 1

Check the signposts and answer the following questions (which your friend who has no knowledge of Chinese characters might ask you).

- 1 In which part of the park is the lake?
- 2 Which way will you turn if you want to have some hot drinks?
- 3 Where will you find a telephone kiosk?
- 4 If you decide to have a meal, which way should you turn?
- 5 Where is the exit?

Direction words

Now let's learn the direction words. These words are not only often found in place names, but also in people's names.

Do you remember the following words – 东南、东北、西南、西北?

Yes, they are SE, NE, SW and NW in English, i.e. the reverse of the Chinese word order. Note the use of 、 between the items. This is known as a pause mark and is used in a list after each item where we would use a comma in English. A comma is reserved for longer pauses in Chinese.

The following Chinese cities/provinces all have direction words in them:

北京、西安、南京、河北、河南、山东、山西、广东、广西、湖南、湖北、海南、西藏

河	hé	river
广	guǎng	broad
湖	hú	lake
海	hǎi	sea
藏	zàng	the Zang (Tibetan) nationality

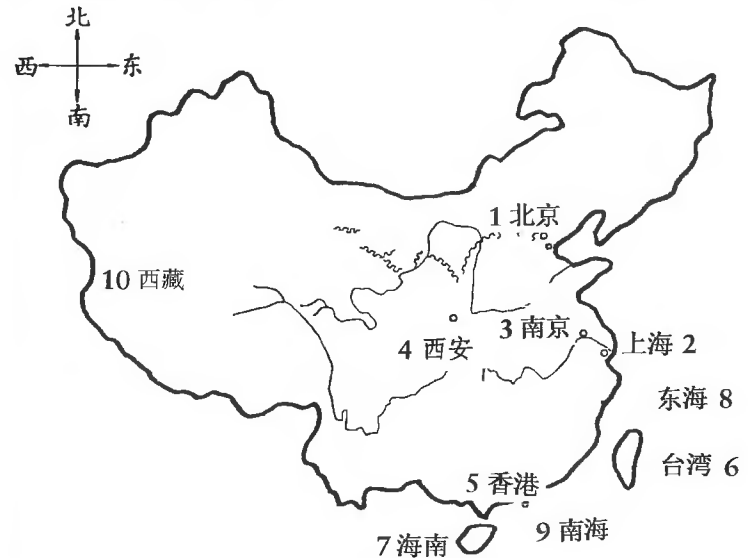

i Now you know the Chinese characters for China: 中国, the Middle Kingdom. The Chinese regarded China as lying at the centre of the world, hence the name.

When listing the cardinal points we say north, south, east, west, whereas the Chinese say 东南西北 (E, S, W, N) or 东西南北 (E, W, S, N) for the four directions. They also use the phrase 东西南北中 to refer to the whole country. There is a TV programme called 东西南北中 which introduces places of interest from all over China.

东方 and 西方 are 'the East' and 'the West'.

Exercise 2

See how many places you can recognize on the map below.

i Place names in China

河北、河南 The Yellow River divides the two provinces. One is north of the river, hence 河北, and the other south of the river, hence 河南.

山东、山西 Taihang Mountain is between Shandong and Shanxi Provinces, hence the names 山东, east of the mountain(s) and 山西 west of the mountain(s).

湖南、湖北 Hubei and Hunan Provinces are north and south of 洞庭湖 Dongting Lake, one of the biggest lakes in China.

Exercise 3

Do you know where these places are?

- 1 中东
- 2 地中海
- 3 南美
- 4 北海 (near the UK)

Exercise 4

Match the road signs with their correct pinyin equivalents:

Exercise 6

- a 禁止吸烟 b 请勿入内 c 禁止停车

Exercise 9

Can you spot the mistakes in these phrases? Circle the incorrect character and write its correct form. Look at the cartoon below if you are not sure.

- a 请勿昭相 b 小心解电
c 请勿吸烟 d 请勿随地灶痰

No spitting No smoking No photography Danger: Electric Shock

Formation of new characters

In Unit 2, we looked at various ways of creating new characters: radical plus radical, radical plus phonetic. Here are two much less common methods but ones which are of great interest. In the first group, one component is the radical and the other component serves a double function, representing both the meaning and the sound:

女 + 取 (qǔ) to obtain → 娶 (qǔ) to marry (as of a man taking a woman into his family)

女 + 家 (jiā) family, home → 嫁 (jià) to marry (as of a woman being taken into her husband's family)

These two examples also show us the patriarchal nature of traditional Chinese society. Women married into their husbands' families and it was customary for the women to live with their in-laws, not for the husbands to live with theirs. It was only men from very poor families, who could not afford to pay a bride price, who moved into their wives' homes. This was considered to be very shameful and in such cases the children of the marriage would take their mother's family name. In this context, it is interesting to note that the character for 'treacherous' or 'traitor' was 姦 (jiān); it also meant 'adultery'. It is now written 奸, but nevertheless the fact remains that the radical is 女. The character for 'slave' 奴 (nú) also has a female radical.

In the second group, two separate characters (not always radicals) are put together to form new characters. The meaning of the new character is directly related to both of the original characters. Do you remember 不 bù (not) in 不公平?

不 + 正 zhèng (straight) = 歪 wāi (crooked)
不 + 好 hǎo (good) = 孬 nāo (bad)
不 + 用 yòng (use) = 甬 bēng (don't) 不 + 口 kǒu (mouth) = 否 fǒu (deny; or not)
(as in 是否 'whether or not')

The pronunciation of such characters is interesting. The pronunciation of 歪 wāi bears no resemblance to bù or zhèng but sounds suitably crooked. The other three have taken on some of the characteristics of their 'parents'!

Exercise 10

Which radical is missing? (We have put the English translation of each word in brackets to help you.)

- a 娄上 (upstairs) b 艮行 (bank)
c 酉吧 (bar) d 反店 (restaurant)

Exercise 11

Fill in each of the blanks with one of these characters: 员、车、酒、泉. Again, we have put the English translation in brackets to help you.

- a 火__站 (train station) b 葡萄__ (wine)
c 矿__水 (mineral water) d 服务__ (attendant)

Exercise 12

Match the signs with their correct translation:

玄武湖	Xuánwǔ Hú	name of lake in Nanjing
中山陵	Zhōngshānlíng	(see picture below)
都	dōu	both, all
很	hěn	very
回	huí	to return

* 的 de This character is required for grammatical purposes (cf. Teach Yourself Beginner's Chinese, page 27). For the purposes of this exercise you can ignore it; the meaning of the phrase should still be clear.

signs (3)

In this unit you will learn

- more characters in advertisements
- some characters used in menus
- how to fill in simple forms

Let's do some more work on signs. The ones in this exercise are much more difficult than those in Unit 6, but even if you only recognize one or two characters in each sign you should be able to match it with its English equivalent from the box below. We have done one for you. The English translations all come from real life!

Exercise 1

- a 国际、香港到达 b 吸烟室
c 行李检查 d 凭票入内 e 欢迎使用太平洋信用卡 f 办手续 g 旅游投诉电话
h 南京中国国际旅行社

- 8 No Entry Without Ticket
- 9 Check-In

A selection of Chinese notices, all of which appear in Exercise 1 above, follows. One of them is in full-form characters. Can you spot which?

iii

You now have a few days off before you fly home via Shanghai where you have some business to attend to. You decide you'd like to do some shopping. To save time, you take a taxi from the hotel. As you get into the front, you notice a sign* on the front passenger's window: 前排客座只准坐婦女、兒童。(婦, a woman holding a broom, is the full form of the simplified character 妇 and 兒 is the full form of the simplified character 儿 which means 'child/son' and is also a radical.) The driver points to the sign and indicates that you should sit in the back. Do you know why? (Men are not allowed in the front seats of taxis, in case they hit the driver over the head or try to rob him – it's thought women are less likely to do this!)

You arrive at a large shopping mall. Look at the floor plan below and then do the exercise which follows it. Your knowledge of radicals will come in handy here!

* This sign was seen in Shenzhen near Hong Kong.

- 1 Is D a cinema or a restaurant?
- 2 Do you go to B or E to post a letter?
- 3 Where do you go to buy clothes?
- 4 Which is the bank?
- 5 Would you buy a Cornetto or Kentucky Fried Chicken at H?
- 6 Where do you go to buy food?

Exercise 3

You are surprised to see how many brand names commonly found in the West you can see in the shopping mall. In the next exercise there are five brand names in Chinese characters. Give the English equivalent for each of them. Which is the odd one out? (We've given you some of the pinyin to help you.)

If you're finding this difficult, the photos below may assist you:

Exercise 4

A Chinese friend with a car is driving you back to your hotel. You come to a large intersection. Your friend is a wonderful man but tends to be a little stingy. Will he take the left fork (a) or the right (b)? (Notice the characters 公 in (a) and 费 in (b), both of which you met in Unit 4.)

Which one would normally be the better road?

Exercise 5

You get back pretty late, happy but tired, and decide to have a relaxing morning the next day with a late breakfast in your room. Unfortunately you've only been left the Chinese Breakfast Room Service card (below and overleaf) to hang on your door. You decide to give it a go. You work out that there are four different types of breakfast. Can you list them in English in the order they appear on the card?

- e What do the last two characters in each category mean?
- f What is the one character that is common to all four categories in addition to 早餐?
- g What does it mean (have a guess)?
- h In the first five lines at the top of the card, you are asked to give some of your details including your name, number of guests, signature, room number and date. Would you be able to fill them in? (Today is 10 August.)

Exercise 6

You decide to go for the second category at ¥78.00. You realize that where there is a line of characters and then a series of boxes underneath you are probably expected to tick one of the boxes. You do this and hang the notice outside your door. The next morning your breakfast tray has on it apple juice, two over easy (done on both sides) fried eggs, served with ham, two slices of toast, fresh fruit yoghurt and a pot of coffee.

- a Which boxes did you tick? (Go back and tick what you ordered.)
- b What did you get without having to tick a box for it?
- c Write it out in Chinese characters too.
- d Identify the characters for service charge and write them out.
- e How much does the service charge add to your bill?

Exercise 7

After a leisurely breakfast you decide to fill in the guest questionnaire. In the Food and Beverage section you tick 'good' for the Cantonese restaurant, 'very good' for the Sichuan restaurant and 'fair' for Room Service (the eggs were hard). Which columns do you tick?

	很好	好	一般	差
广东餐厅 四川餐厅

Exercise 8

You also need to reconfirm your flight to Shanghai. On the form which follows, the English translations have been deleted. Can you put them back in? (You will have to best guess a few of them!) Oh, and fill out the form in Chinese, where you can.

Flight Confirmation Request		航班确认申请
姓 _____	名 _____	房号 _____
航空公司 _____	离开日期 _____	护照号码 _____
航班号 _____	起飞时间 _____
目的地 _____ 备注 _____

Exercise 9

You now have to book a hotel in Shanghai. A friend has given you two lists of possibles, one in Chinese and one in English, but they are not in the same order. Can you match the two? (Bear in mind that the English translations, although authentic, are not always very accurate.)

- 1 城市酒店 (上海)
- 2 上海日航飯店
- 3 上海揚子江大酒店
- 4 花園飯店 (上海)
- 5 广东国际大酒店
- 6 上海国际贵都大饭店

- | | |
|-------------------------|---------------------------|
| a Garden Hotel Shanghai | b Hotel Equatorial |
| c Hotel Nikko Shanghai | d GITIC Plaza Hotel |
| e City Hotel Shanghai | f Yangtze New World Hotel |

One of the hotels is not even in Shanghai! Your friend must have made a mistake. Which one is it?

广东国际大酒店

上海国际贵都大饭店

Exercise 10

Look at the hotel names in Chinese more closely:

- i Do they all use the same word for hotel?
- ii Which three hotels put the character for 'big' in front of the word 'hotel'?
- iii In 花園飯店, are the characters written in full form or simplified characters?
- iv Where does the word Shanghai appear in the Chinese version of Hotel Nikko Shanghai?
- v In which other hotel signs does the same thing happen?
- vi For which two hotels does the word 'Shanghai' appear in brackets?
- vii For which two hotels does the word 'Shanghai' appear in the Chinese but not in the English?

Exercise 11

You have just remembered you need to send off an urgent letter to a business acquaintance who is on holiday without a phone or fax. You write the letter quickly and find an envelope on your desk.

  贴 邮 票 处  收件人姓名及地址 <hr style="width: 80%; margin: 10px auto;"/> <hr style="width: 80%; margin: 10px auto;"/> 寄件人姓名及地址 <hr style="width: 80%; margin: 10px auto;"/> <hr style="width: 80%; margin: 10px auto;"/> 航空

- a What do you think 航空 means? (cf. radical 舟)
- b Identify the two characters for postage stamp(s) by circling them. (贴邮票处 means 'stick stamp place'. cf. 'post office' in Exercise 2.)
- c You know 姓名 means 'name' and 地址 means 'address'. What do you think 及 means?
- d 收 in 收件人 means to 'receive'. What do you think 寄 in 寄件人 means?
- e Write down the characters for 'sender' and 'recipient'.

entertainment

In this unit you will learn

- how to read characters on tickets
- how to read posters about shows and exhibitions
- about characters used on currency
- measurements in Chinese characters
- more Chinese place names in characters

After a busy day, you decide to see a Chinese film. At the local cinema, you see that three films are on show that evening.

红楼 电影院

今、明日电影

《大上海》	今晚七点、九点十分 (客满)
《南方来信》	今晚八点一刻, 明天上午十点半
《红河谷》	今晚九点二十, 明晚六点四十五

红 hóng red 谷 gǔ valley

Exercise 1

Please answer the questions in Chinese.

- What is the name of the cinema?
- Which show is sold out?
- It's nearly 8 o'clock. What is the next film available?
- What films are showing tomorrow?

i Seating in Chinese cinemas, theatre, etc.

All the even seat numbers are grouped together on one side and all the uneven ones on the other. Only seat numbers 2 and 1 are next to each other sequentially. This means that when you go into a Chinese cinema for example, you need to check whether your seat numbers are even or odd. If they are even you will need to follow the sign for 双号 shuānghào seats and if odd the signs for 单号 dānhào seats. It is obviously important to understand the way the seating is organized if ever you are buying seats yourself and to know that 楼上 lóushàng means 'upstairs' and 楼下 lóuxià 'downstairs'.

Exercise 2

You are going to see a show and your ticket looks like this:

红楼电影院

电影票

六月二十日 晚七点四十五分

楼上 九排十八号

- Will you be sitting upstairs or downstairs?
- Which entrance do you go to? (i.e. odd or even numbers)
- What time will the show start?
- What is the date of the show?

Exercise 3

You are staying at 北京饭店. Look at the bus stop board.

西 ← ————— → 东 人山天宝西儿明北大东中 民东地玉湖童海京同方山 公北市大路乐商饭路医路
园路场街 园城店 院

Now decide first which direction and then how many stops you should take before you:

- get to the People's Park.
- get to the Children's Amusement Park.
- get to the Tiandi (Heaven and Earth) Market.
- get to the Oriental (East) Hospital.

Exercise 4

Look at the following posters and answer the questions below. (The questions can refer to any of the posters.)

A 英国教育展 时间: 六月九日 - 六月十七日 地点: 北京大学 免费入场	B 英文图书展销会 时间: 五月七日至五月十八日 地点: 星星书店 (学院路1号) 欢迎光临
C 法国印象派画展 时间: 五月十四日 - 五月二十日 地点: 中国美术馆 票价: 20元	D 日本电器产品展销会 时间: 六月二十四日至七月九日 地点: 北京展览馆 票价: 10元

- 1 Where is the British Education Exhibition taking place?
- 2 How much does it cost to go the French Impressionist Exhibition?
- 3 What is on sale at the Japanese Fair?
- 4 Books in which language are being exhibited at the Star Bookshop?
- 5 How many days is the French Impressionist Exhibition on for?
- 6 Which two exhibitions are free (cf. Unit 7, Exercise 1)?
- 7 Which exhibition is on for the longest?

Exercise 5

A fairly standard form can be seen below. Try and work out what information you are being asked for. (We have added letters for ease of reference.)

a 姓名:	b 中文:	c 英文:
d 性别:	e 出生年月:	年 月 日
f 现住址:
g 电话:	h 工作单位:

i The measurements used in China are different from those used in the UK. The following is a table of measurements:

1 尺 (chǐ)	= 1.094 英尺 (yīngchǐ) foot
1 英尺	= 0.305 米 (mǐ) metre
1 米	= 1.094 码 (mǎ) yard
1 码	= 0.914 米
1 公里 (gōnglǐ)	= 0.621 英里 (yīnglǐ) mile
1 英里	= 1.609 公里 kilometre

1 斤* (jīn) = 1.102 磅 (bàng) pound
 1 磅 = 0.454 公斤 kilogram

* 斤 is a radical in its own right.

Exercise 6

Prepare a note to give to a taxi driver, telling him where you want to go. You can start the note with 我要去 which means 'I want to go to', although this is not essential. For example: 'I want to go to Number 12 Peace Road' - 我要去和平路12号. You will find all the characters you need on the bus stop in Exercise 3 above (page 85).

- a 8 West Lake Road
- b The Oriental Hotel
- c The Children's Amusement Park
- d The People's Park

Exercise 7

Give the stroke order of the following characters, and put the radical in the brackets after each one.

饭 _____ () 楼 _____ () 河 _____ () 院 _____ () 场 _____ ()

You are now on your way to the airport. First of all you have to pay the airport tax.

How much is it? Yes, ¥50, but have you noticed that 50 is not written as 五十 but as 伍拾? This is because numbers on tickets, coupons and bank notes, on forms in banks and post offices, etc. are written differently from the (simple) ones you learnt in Unit 4. This is to prevent forgeries or misunderstandings. (It would be easy, for instance, to make 一 into 三.)

Here are the two lists of numbers for you to compare:

Ordinary numbers 一 二 三 四 五 六 七 八 九 十

'Complex' numbers 壹 貳 參 肆 伍 陸 柒 捌 玖 拾

Three examples of bank notes, which all use the 'complex' numbers, follow. There are ten 角 (jiǎo) in one 圓 (yuán) (which is also written in the full form; 元 (yuán) is the simplified form used in daily life).

Exercise 8

Your business in 上海 is finished and you are flying from 上海 to pick up your flight in 香港 (Hong Kong). Here is your boarding card (登机牌).

Air China	登机牌	中国民航
航班号	日期	时间	目的地	登机门
5359	六月七日	九点四十	香港	后门

- What are the Chinese characters for 'destination'?
- What is the date and time of your flight?
- Which door are you told to take, the front door or the rear one?

You are given the menu for the meal you will be served during the flight. It is shown in both simplified and full characters. The full-character version was the original and is on the right.

轻膳

Exercise 9

Answer the following questions based on the menu above. (You may find it easier to circle some of the answers on the menu rather than writing them out or translating them into English.)

- What do the characters 香港 mean?
- Is rice served with the meal?
- Is beef (牛) or lamb (羊) on the menu?
- You have two choices of main meal, which are joined by the character for 'or'. Which is it?
- What is the dessert? (Go back and check what the character for 'fresh' is, Unit 2, Exercise 2.)
- Which hot drinks can you choose from after the meal? (红 hóng = red; 绿 lǜ = green)

You are now on your flight back to London (伦敦). The services offered by the cabin crew are shown on the card (which is authentic):

鸡尾酒	香
*	港 晚餐
*	伦
免税精品销售	敦
*
小吃 鸡味即食面 三文治 阁下如需享用以上各款小吃, 请向机舱服务员索取
*
免税精品销售
请注意, 此项服务于航机抵达目的地之两小时前停止。
*
热毛巾及果汁
*

Exercise 10

Please answer the following questions (some good guesswork is required!):

- How many times is 'duty free' (see Unit 6, Exercise 7) mentioned?
- How many hours before landing does in-flight shopping stop?
- Circle the characters for 'attendant'.
- What do you think 小吃 are?
- Which comes first on the menu, snacks or dinner?
- What is a 三文治 (sānwénzhì)? (Say the whole word aloud and you should be able to guess it correctly.)
- What do you get with your wake-up towel – an apple, fruit juice or coffee?

i In the People's Republic of China there are four municipal cities (Beijing, Shanghai, Tianjin and Chongqing), 22 provinces (excluding Taiwan), five autonomous regions (including Tibet) and two special administrative regions (Hong Kong and Macao).

Each has a single character as its short form. Here are some examples:

北京 Běijīng	京	四川 Sīchuān	川
上海 Shànghǎi	沪 hù	广东 Guǎngdōng	粤 yuè
天津 Tiānjīn	津	香港 Xiānggǎng	港
山东 Shāndōng	鲁 lǚ	青海 Qīnghǎi	青
湖南 Húnán	湘 xiāng	西藏 Xīzàng	藏

This is used in a number of situations. Some of the railway lines and motorways are named after the two cities or provinces connected by them. For example, 京沪线 (线 xiàn rail line), 京津公路 (公路 gōnglù highway, an A road), 青藏公路 etc. The regional styles of opera are thus termed 京剧 (剧 jù drama), 沪剧, 川剧. Types of cuisine are also called 川菜, 粤菜 etc.

In this unit you will learn

- some common wishes
- some set phrases and proverbs involving numbers
- how to read the weather forecast in newspapers
- how to write simple postcards or messages
- about Chinese calligraphy

This unit will provide you with general information on the weather and how to write notes and postcards in Chinese. It will also include a section on calligraphy and the different styles of writing Chinese characters which have always been highly prized by the Chinese.

You have been back in Britain for four months now and feel very proud of the postcard you have just written to your Chinese friend for his birthday: you feel your writing has made real progress!

大明,
你好!
我回英国已经六个月了, 工作常常很忙, 可是我很高兴。
我很想你! 下个月是你的生日, 祝你:
生日快乐! 身体健康! 工作愉快! 万事如意!
你的朋友

生词	Shēngcí	New words
回	huí	return
已经	yǐjīng	already
工作	gōngzuò	(to) work
常常	chángcháng	often
忙	máng	busy
可是	kěshì	but
高兴	gāoxìng	happy
想	xiǎng	to miss (somebody); to think (of)
生日	shēngrì	birthday
祝	zhù	to wish
快乐	kuàilè	happy, pleasant
身体	shēntǐ	body, health
健康	jiànkāng	healthy
万事	wànshì	10,000 matters
如意	rúyì	as one wishes
朋友	péngyou	friend

The Chinese often finish their letters by using phrases like:

	Literal meaning	Wish you . . .
祝你:
走运!	Walk lucky	Good luck!
生日快乐!	Birthday happy	Happy birthday!

一路平安!	All the way peace	Bon voyage!
身体健康!	Body healthy	Good health!
工作愉快!	Work happy	Happiness in your work!
万事如意!	10,000 things as wish	May everything turn out exactly as you would wish it!

Common greetings at festivals are:

祝你:			Wish you . . .
新年快乐!	新 new	年 year	Happy New Year!
春节快乐!	春 spring	节 festival	Happy (Chinese) New Year!
情人节快乐!	情 affection	情人 lover	Happy Valentine's Day!
复活节快乐!	复 again	活 living	Happy Easter!
圣诞节快乐!	圣 holy	诞 birth	Happy Christmas!

i The Chinese seem to have a passion for numbers. Many idioms have numbers in them. 万事如意 is one of them. 万 is a particularly favoured word in Chinese culture. Unlike in English, where 10,000 means 'ten thousand', the Chinese has a term 万 for it, and it represented and still represents a very large number. While in English one may wish someone (or a cause) a long life by saying 'Long live XX', the Chinese equivalent is to wish someone or something to live 万岁 wàn suì '10,000 years'. Therefore, 万岁 was used to address or greet emperors. Understandably, it was also used for Mao Zedong, the late Chinese leader. His supporters used to wave his little red book and shout: '毛主席万岁、万万岁!' 'Máo zhǔxí* wàn suì, wàn wàn suì!'

* 主席 zhǔxí chairman

Here are some other commonly used idioms with numbers in them:

	Literal meaning
一心一意	one heart, one mind
三心二意	three hearts and two minds
一心二用	one heart, two uses
一国两制	one country, two systems
三言两语	three words and two speeches
七上八下	seven ups and eight downs
百年大计	100 years big plan
千山万水	1,000 mountains and 10,000 waters
千家万户	1,000 families and 10,000 household(s)
千言万语	1,000 words and 10,000 speeches

Exercise 1

Here are the 'proper' translations for some of the idioms above but they are not in the same order. Can you match them up?

not giving undivided attention to something to be in two minds whole-hearted(ness); with undivided attention to be in a state of anxiety and nervousness (of speech) brief (covering) a vast area of land every family and household (there is) a great deal to express a project of vital and far-reaching importance

Exercise 2

We feel we must give you the chance to practise your weather vocabulary! Here is the weather forecast 天气预报 tiānqì yùbào for tomorrow in a Chinese newspaper.

<人民日报> 四月二十七日 星期六

天气预报

今天白天晴	今天晚上阴, 有小雨
风向: 南风	风向: 西北
风力: 一、二级	风力: 四、五级
最高气温 20 °C	最低气温 8 °C

- 1 When will the weather be fine today?
- 2 What direction will the wind be coming from a during the day? b during the night?
- 3 Will the wind be stronger in the evening or during the day?
- 4 When will it rain?
- 5 What is tomorrow's date?

报上说今天不会下雨
But the paper said it wouldn't rain today.

Exercise 3

Read the following postcards and answer the questions after them. (The questions can refer to any of the postcards.)

小王:
你好!
我们的会谈很成功, 我认识了很多新朋友。
我现在住在和平饭店, 这里的饭菜都很好吃。
祝你春节快乐!
你的朋友 李和平 九八年一月十五日

美:
你好! 南京天气很不好, 天天下雨。我很想你。
祝你情人节快乐! 爱你!
大海 二月六日

小明:
你好!
北京真好。每天天气都很好, 不冷不热。 昨天我去了人民大会堂。我明天去西安。
祝你圣诞节快乐!
你的朋友 马天民 二〇〇〇年十二月七号

- 1 Which hotel was Li Heping (李和平) staying in?
- 2 What was the food like at Li Heping's hotel?
- 3 Which city was Ma Tianmin (马天民) staying in?
- 4 Where did he go yesterday?
- 5 Where was the weather good?
- 6 Where did it rain?
- 7 Why was Dahai (大海) writing to Mei?
- 8 Where is Ma Tianmin going tomorrow?
- 9 When did Li Heping write to Xiao Wang?

i Traditionally, Chinese writing was done from right to left and from top to bottom. This tradition has been largely kept in Hong Kong and Taiwan, where newspaper articles as well as books are still mostly printed vertically. The following is an illustration.

平衡集

英語

九七年前，人們對回歸祖國以後有很大假設或者看法，到了今天發覺並不一一實現，例如九七年之後此地人們不再覺得要學好英語。

近十年間，香港的大學生英語水準下降是人所周知的事，法律學生自不例外，於是早幾年前有些人覺得香港法庭變成中文世界的日子即將來臨，英語好不好也不打緊了，法庭遲早全用中文聆訊，政治正確最重要。

那知道過了九七，不止香港人仍在學英語，國內的人更多在學英語，原來根據統計數字，此刻中國國內在學英語的學生比在美國說英語的美國人還要多。

i Calligraphy

Even today, the art of calligraphy (the writing of Chinese characters as an art form) is highly regarded in China and many educated Chinese will hang scrolls of characters, beautifully mounted, on their walls, just as we would hang a picture by, say, Turner or Picasso. Calligraphers all have their own individual styles and, of course, their admirers and critics, just as painters do. (As calligraphy is an art with its roots in the ancient past, these scrolls are always written in the traditional way from top to bottom and usually in their full form, which is visually more pleasing.) Look at the examples.

Here they are again in their printed form in both full and simplified characters, with the full form on the left. The new words and translation follow. Would you be surprised if we tell you that out of the fourteen characters, you have already come across twelve?!

一席坐擁百城書
兩足不出門半尺

一席坐擁百城書
兩足不出門半尺

生词 Shēngcí New words

席 xí mat, seat (cf. 主席 chairman)
 拥 yōng to possess (扌 hand radical)
 城 chéng town, city (土 earth radical)

两 足 不 出 门 半 尺 two foot not out door half foot (length) 一 席 坐 拥 百 城 书
 one seat sit have hundred town book

(I) do not (have to) step out of the door half a foot,
 (yet I) sit surrounded by books from a hundred towns.

And can you read the following eight characters, which run from right to left and top to bottom? You can see that two different styles are used here, too.

A 自 独
 力 立 更 自 生 主

B 自 独
 力 立 更 自
 生 主

独立自主 to be independent and self-reliant
 自力更生 to rely on one's own strength to regenerate

生词 Shēngcí New words

独 dú independent, alone
 立 lì to stand (a radical)
 自 zì self (a radical)
 主 zhǔ to take the initiative
 更 gēng to change, to replace

Exercise 4

Test your recognition of 'stylized' characters. You might find this hard at first. Look at the sign and answer the following questions.

- 1 Complete the characters for 'snack' and 'tea' 中西__餐、__座
- 2 Write out the character for Conference (Room) __ __ 厅
- 3 Rewrite the character after 大 in its 'normal' form.
- 4 What do the last four characters mean?

i Seals

Seals are used for institutional as well as individual purposes such as signatures on documents (bank or post office deposits) and on paintings or scrolls. (Go back and look at the paintings and examples of calligraphy in this unit.) Just like calligraphy, seals are viewed as an art form, as they involve both design and calligraphy. The following three examples are from different dynasties.

- i Western Han 西汉 (206BC-AD23) ii Western Jin 西晋 (AD265-316) iii Qing 清 (1644-1911)

Mini-test 2

Exercise 1

Amend the word order in each of the following sentences and then put them in the correct sequence.

- 1 我休息中午。
- 2 我十一点睡觉晚上。
- 3 我四点下午去喝茶。
- 4 我起床七点一刻早上。

Exercise 2

Write the address in Chinese on an envelope to your pen pal.

Mr Wang Mingshan*
International University
9 East Lake Road
Nanjing, China

* míng is 'bright', and shān is 'mountain'.

(Remember that the Chinese write the bigger place (i.e. the country) first and the individual person last.)

Exercise 3

Leave a notice using the following form at the reception counter of the hotel you are staying in. The notice is intended for a Chinese friend who does not read any English, telling her your whereabouts during the day in case she comes to visit you. Write in Chinese and include the following information:

- Today's date is 6 September.
- You will be at the Oriental University from 8.30 a.m. to 4.30 p.m.
- Comments: You will return to the hotel at 5 p.m.
- Your room number is 526 and your name is Helen/David King.

Where are you? 你在哪里?

Date 日期 _____

I will be at 我将在 _____

From _____ a.m. / p.m. to _____ a.m. / p.m.

从上午/下午 _____ 至上午/下午 _____

Comments 要求 _____

Name 姓名 _____ Room No. 房号 _____

Signature 签名 _____

Peace Hotel

西安

Xi'an

和平宾馆

Exercise 4

Write a postcard in Chinese characters to your Chinese friend in Beijing saying that you really like Shanghai. The weather is sunny but often windy (有风). Tell her you are going by train to Nanjing. You are going back to your friend's in Beijing on 5 March. Tell her you miss her. (Refer back to Unit 6, Exercise 15 for some help with the vocabulary.)

Exercise 5

Look at the next few signs and see if you can give the answers for each of them.

百香咖啡厅 位于一楼 24小时营业

- 1 What is Pepper's Chinese name? Please write it out in characters.
- 2 Is Pepper's a restaurant?
- 3 Where is it situated?
- 4 What are its opening hours?

艺苑酒廊 位于二楼 早晨11:00至凌晨01:00营业

- 1 Where is it in the hotel?
- 2 What are its opening hours?

香怡阁 正宗粤式烹饪 位于三楼 午餐: 11:30-14:00
晚餐: 17:30-22:30

- 1 What sort of food does it serve? (Go back and look at the i section on page 91.)
- 2 Where is it located?
- 3 Does it serve breakfast?

罗马意大利餐厅 正宗意大利风味 位于三楼 晚餐: 17:30-22:30

- 1 What kind of restaurant is it? (see names of countries in Unit 5)
- 2 Where is it situated?
- 3 What meals does it serve?

Look carefully at the following photos.

- 1 What do you think is happening at the booth, besides the advertising of Beck's beer? (The characters at the top are 游船售票处.)
- 2 Is the following sign advertising ice-cream, freezers or furniture?

- 3 Which city was the following photo taken in? Which department put up the notice? (Look up unfamiliar characters in your dictionary.)

Exercise 7

Study the departures board below, then answer the questions. (Cf. 服务台, Unit 5, p. 47.)

车次	开往	时间	站台
123	南京	12点05分	12
214	西安	12点17分	4
14	上海	13点26分	6
27	北京	14点30分	9

Which platform would you go to if you wanted to go to the following cities: Beijing, Xi'an, Nanjing, Shanghai?

Exercise 8

The next two signs are strictly for fun.

Can you spot the two characters for 'delicious' in a? Try to write them out.

a

The proper translation for a would be something like this:

口香糖好吃	Chewing gum is delicious.
污渍难除	Dirty stains are difficult to get rid of.
请君莫乱吐	Please do not spit it out at random.
珍惜文物	Treasure cultural relics.

Photograph a is actually written in the form of a quatrain with lines 2, 3 and 4 rhyming!

b

Can you spot the character for 'grass' in b? The sign actually means:

The fragrant grass has feelings.
It hopes that you have righteousness (i.e. to look after it).

using a Chinese- English dictionary

In this unit you will learn

- how to use a Chinese dictionary
- about Chinese word processing
- some more Chinese idioms

In this unit we explain how to use a Chinese-English dictionary and give you some information on Chinese word processing. We finish by explaining a little about Chinese idioms, which are so popular in both the written and spoken language.

Using a Chinese-English dictionary

Most of the dictionaries you will have access to use pinyin to list the characters in alphabetical order according to their pronunciation and tone. This is only of use if you know how a particular character is pronounced, otherwise you will have to look it up using the radical. (There are other systems but this is the most common and the most straightforward at this stage.) Having identified the radical (not always so easy, but refer to the Table of radicals, pages 140-4, for help) and counted up the number of strokes it has, you look for it in the radical index at the front of the dictionary.

We have included the radical index from a popular dictionary on page 112 (汉英词典 A Chinese-English Dictionary, Beijing, 1980). It may prove useful to you as a reference. The number to the left of the radical indicates its position in the character index proper.

Radicals are arranged under sub-headings according to the number of strokes they have (一画 yī huà one stroke, 二画 èr huà two strokes, 三画 sān huà three strokes . . . usually up to twelve and over, 十二画以上 shí'èr huà yǐshàng). Each radical has a number assigned to it, which may vary slightly from dictionary to dictionary – so don't automatically assume it's the same. Having found which number radical it is (the number may be to the left or to the right of the radical itself), look it up in the character index proper which immediately follows and which lists each radical in the order in which it appears in the radical index. Under each radical are listed all the characters which have that radical in common and they in turn are listed under the same sub-headings as in the radical index, 一画、二画 . . . 十八画以上, i.e. the number of strokes the character has when the radical has been taken away.

Radicals with comparatively few characters assigned to them may not list each sub-heading individually but may sometimes group a few of them together, e.g. 六至八画 liù zhì bā huà six to eight strokes, 九至十一画 jiǔ zhì shí'èr huà nine to eleven strokes, etc.

Thus 情 qíng (emotions) is listed under the heart radical 忄, under the sub-heading eight strokes 八画, and will come after 恨 hèn (hate; to hate) which comes under the sub-heading six strokes 六画, which in turn will come after 怕 pà (to fear) listed under five strokes 五画. Another example is 饭 fàn (cooked rice; food), which will come under the food radical 饣 and be listed under the sub-heading four strokes 四画 and will precede 饱 bǎo (have eaten one's fill, be full) which will be listed under the sub-heading five strokes 五画. We hope you have got the idea!

Let's assume you have found the character you were looking for in the index (检字表). Next to it will be either a page number, as in the Character index which we reproduce on page 113, or the pinyin and tone mark for it, either of which will enable you to look it up in the main body of the dictionary.

Remember that characters with the same pronunciation are listed with those in the first tone (indicated by ˊ) first, then those in the second tone (indicated by ˊ), which in turn precede those in the third (ˇ) and fourth (ˋ) tones respectively. It sounds hard work but it's not as bad as it looks once you get the hang of it, and it can be very satisfying! It is reckoned that there are around 4,000 characters in daily use of which approximately 2,000 are needed to get a general idea of what is going on in a newspaper.

Now try looking up three different characters in the dictionary. (We've printed the relevant pages for you: see pages 114-15.)

贺 物 氧

- Step 1 Identify the radical and find it in the radical index.
- Step 2 Find the radical in the character index.
- Step 3 Count up the number of strokes in the character once you have taken the radical away.
- Step 4 Look under the sub-heading with the corresponding number of strokes and find your character.
- Step 5 Go to the page indicated and locate the character again. Bingo!

Exercise 1

For each of the following characters take out the radical and then count up the number of strokes remaining. Indicate what the radical is.

Example: 星 → 5 (日)

a 公	b 期	c 报	d 场	e 箭
f 楼	g 电	h 德	i 拿	j 室
k 路	l 海	m 馆	n 旅

Exercise 2

Write a character for each of the following phonetic transcriptions so as to make a word with the character given. (You might have to check some of these in the Vocabulary at the back of the book.)

Example: 冰 xiāng → 冰(箱)

a shàng 午, xià 午	b 十点 bàn
c 三点一 kè	d wǎn 上
e Fǎ 国, Zhōng 国	f 电 yǐng , 电 huà

m 东 běi , běi 京	n 上 hǎi , Hǎinán

Exercise 3

Translate the following passage into English. You will have to look up any unfamiliar characters in a Chinese-English dictionary:

近十年间, 香港的大学生英语水准下降是人所周知的事, 法律学生自不例外 哪知道过了九七,* 不止香港人仍在学英语, 国内的人更多在学英语, 原来根据统计数字, 此刻中国国内在学英语的学生比在美国说英语的美国人还要多。(Taken from the Hong Kong newspaper article on page 97, but written in simplified characters.)

*1997, the year when Hong Kong was returned to the People's Republic of China.

Chinese word processing

No one denies that Chinese characters are more difficult to write than English and most other languages in the world. As you have read in the previous section it is more complicated to look up a character in a Chinese dictionary than to look up an English word in an English dictionary. How about word processing with a computer in this computer age?

The Chinese claim that they were the first to use letter press printing some 1,500 years ago. While in the West the use of a portable typewriter was quite common, hardly any Chinese even got near to a Chinese 'typewriter'. It was a clumsy machine. The typist had to select each lead character from a pool and punch it to print on a stencil, which was then used to print on paper. It was a very slow process!

Computers have changed the world. Typing, or writing in general for that matter, has been made much easier and faster. Some 20 years ago when computers became widely available in the West and transformed writing, many people, Chinese and Westerners alike, thought that Chinese writing was doomed in the computer age. How can a writing system as complicated as Chinese possibly be processed by a computer as fast and easily as English? Surprisingly, the answer is: it can! In fact, the number of Chinese word-processing packages available in computer software shops is increasing rapidly.

There are, broadly speaking, two main input methods. One could be termed the phonetic input method and the other the component input method.

Phonetic input method

If you are familiar with pinyin, the phonetic representation of the sounds in the Chinese language, this should be straightforward. Even if you are not, you have come across it many times in this book. It is the phonetic system that we have adopted throughout. Refer also to the Pronunciation guide for a fuller explanation.

Every character can be represented in pinyin, i.e. it can be given a representation of how it is supposed to sound. Logically, you can key in the pinyin of a character and the character should show up. This is the underlying principle of this input method. You may ask 'but what about tones and homonyms?' As you already know, there are four tones in the Modern Standard/Mandarin Chinese sound system. The same pinyin spelling with different tones will suggest different words. Even the same pinyin with the same tone would suggest different words. Such words are called homonyms. Take the sound qing, for example. The Xinhua (New China) Dictionary, the most popular pocket Chinese dictionary in China, has listed the following:

qīng 青 圉 淸 蜻 蜻 轻 氢 倾 卿 qǐng 顷 廛 请 馨
qíng 勍 黥 情 晴 靛 擎 擎 qìng 庆 亲 筭 纂 罄 罄

All the characters in the same horizontal line are homonyms. When you key in qing in the computer, you would expect these characters to appear. You then need to select the one you want. Most pinyin input methods would ignore the tones and show all the characters with the same sound regardless of the tones. This is to minimize the number of keys you have to hit for a character. You will find that some of the sounds, such as gei, gen etc. have only one or two characters. Some, however, may have as many as 40 or 60 characters, such as ji, xi etc. The solution is to list characters according to their frequency in use, unlike the dictionary where characters are arranged according to radical and the number of strokes. Therefore, when you key in qing on the computer for the character 晴 (sunny), the following list may appear:

1 请 2 轻 3 淸 4 青 5 情 6 晴 7 氢 8 倾 9 庆 0 擎

You then key in 6 to select 晴. If you hit the ↓ arrow key, it will give you the next ten characters, and so on.

You may have noticed that some Chinese words are formed with one character, such as 好 (good) and 大 (big), while others are formed with more than one character. For example, 朋友 (friend) and 今天 (today) both have two characters. It is therefore important to be aware that Chinese characters and English words are not equivalents. While most single characters can function as independent words on their own, most words consist of two characters, and some three characters. This is not difficult to understand. As we mentioned earlier, some 4,000 characters are used in daily life and general writing. These 4,000 characters form tens of thousands of words and expressions. Since 1900, hardly any new Chinese characters have been created, but huge numbers of new words and expressions have come into the Chinese vocabulary, and many more are still entering the language, all without the number of characters being increased.

While there are many homonyms with a single sound, there are far fewer two-character words which share exactly the same pronunciation and tone. It is precisely because of this that the Chinese word-processing system will allow you to type the pinyin of a whole word, such as pengyou and jintian for you to get 朋友 and 今天. There are no other words in present-day Chinese which sound exactly like pengyou and jintian. If there is more than one word with the same pinyin, the computer will list the options for you to choose from, in the same way as you do with an individual character. In fact when you type pengy for pengyou, 朋友 could well be there as the only candidate. Thus, a ten-stroke or even 30-stroke word can be keyed in with five or six keys. This makes the typing much faster.

This is, however, not the end of the story. Some software systems will even allow you to key in the first letter of a two-, three-, or four-character word and prompt you with the options. For example, you need key only in py, the first letters of peng and you, and 朋友 will appear as one of several options. As a result, you can hit three or four keys to type a 20-stroke or even 40-stroke word or phrase.

Component input method

The principle of this component input method is to deconstruct characters into a finite number of basic strokes. These basic strokes are represented by the English letters, hence correspond to the conventional keyboard. There are several software programs designed on the basis of this principle. They are all quite complex. In addition, as they are being constantly revised and updated, we feel that lengthy explanations are beyond the scope of this book. They are not easy to learn, but can be very fast to use. The advantage of this method is for those who do not speak but can read Chinese, or those who are not good at pinyin, the romanized system.

Chinese idioms 成语

Chinese proverbs or idioms are known as 成语 chéngyǔ, which are set phrases, normally made up of four characters. They are an integral part of the Chinese language. All Chinese of whatever level of education know and use 成语 and the more educated they are, the more likely they are to use them, especially in writing.

Try the next exercise to get a flavour of what 成语 are all about.

Exercise 4

Match each Chinese idiom with its correct translation. Because this is the last exercise, we've decided to make it quite a challenging one, but you have actually met almost all the characters.

You have completed Teach Yourself Beginner's Chinese Script. You should now have mastered the basics of written Chinese and understood how the script works. We hope you have enjoyed unravelling the mysteries of Chinese characters.

If you feel you would now like to learn to speak Chinese as well as write it, why not study Teach Yourself Beginner's Chinese? If you feel you would like to advance on both fronts, then take a look at Teach Yourself Chinese.

祝你走运!

You can find out if there are any Chinese language classes taking place in your area. Many big universities have Chinese departments or language centres which run courses in a number of foreign languages including Chinese. Large cities often have an annual publication listing all the courses taking place that year and where they are held (Floodlight in London is one such example).

You can also go online and look at the following websites, but do remember these are constantly changing and new ones are being added all the time. You can also use a search engine such as Google, and type in 'Chinese characters', 'Chinese language', 'Chinese courses', 'Chinese culture' and so on. This will keep you busy for a lifetime!

Exercise 3

In the last ten years, the fact that the standard of English of Hong Kong's university students has fallen is something that is known to everyone; students of law are no exception... Who would have thought that, after 1997, not only do Hong Kong people still study English but also even more people within China are doing so? In fact, according to statistics, the number of students learning English in China at this present moment is even greater than the number of Americans speaking English in America.

Exercise 4

You will find slight variations in the radical indexes of different dictionaries. See below a list of most of the one- or two-stroke radicals, which do not necessarily carry any meaning. If they do, this does not normally help your understanding of the meaning of the character of which they are the radical. They are, however, indispensable for looking up characters in a dictionary.

Chinese sounds

Vowels

Here is the list of the Chinese vowels with a rough English equivalent sound, and then one or two examples in Chinese. There are single vowels, compound vowels or vowels plus a nasal sound which will be listed separately.

	rough English sound	Chinese examples
a	father	baba, mama
ai	bite	tai, zai
ao	cow	hao, zhao
e	fur	che, he, ge
ei	play	bei, gei, shei, fei
i	tea	didi, feiji, ni
i	*	zi, ci, shi

* after z, c, s, zh, ch, sh and r only. The i is there more or less for cosmetic reasons – no syllable can exist without a vowel. Say the consonant and ‘sit on it’ and you have the sound.

ia	yam	jia, xia
iao	meow	biao, piao, yao ie	yes	bie, xie, ye
iu	yo-yo	liu, jiu, you

y replaces i at the beginning of a word if there is no initial consonant.

o	more	moyimo, mapo
ou	go	dou, zou

u	moo	bu, zhu
ua	suave	gua, hua
uo	war	shuo, cuo, wo
uai	swipe	kuai, wai
ui	weigh	dui, gui, zui

w replaces u at the beginning of a word if there is no initial consonant.

ü	pneumonia	ju, qu, lü, nü
üe	pneumatic + air (said quickly)	yue, xue, jue

Note that ü and üe can occur only with the consonants n, l, j, q and x. As j, q and x cannot occur as j+u, q+u or x+u, the umlaut (¨) over the 'u' in ju, qu and xu has been omitted. n and l, however, can occur as both nu and nü, lu and lü so the umlaut (¨) has been kept.

yu replaces ü, and yue replaces üe if there is no initial consonant.

Here are the vowels with a nasal sound formed with vowels followed by n or ng. Speak through your nose when you pronounce them.

	rough English sound	Chinese examples
an	man	fan, man
ang	bang	zhang, shang
en	under	ren, hen
eng	hung	deng, neng
in	bin	nin, jin, xin
ian	yen	tian, nian, qian
iang	Yangtze (River)	liang, xiang
ing	finger	ming, qing, xing
iong	Jung (the psychoanalyst)	yong, qiong, xiong ong	Jung	tong, cong, hong uan	wangle	wan, suan, huan
un	won	wen, lun, chun uang	wrong	wang, huang, zhuang
üan	pneumatic + end (said quickly)	yuan, quan, xuan
ün	'une' in French	yun, jun, qun

Note that ian is pronounced as if it were ien.

The same rules about y replacing i and w replacing u at the beginning of a word if there is no initial consonant also apply to vowels with a nasal sound.

Yuan replaces üan and yun replaces ün if there is no initial consonant.

Consonants

Here is a list of the Chinese consonants: some of them are quite similar to English sounds, others less so. Those that are very different from the nearest English sound are explained.

	rough English sound	Chinese examples
b	bore	bai, bei
p	poor	pao, pang
m	me	ma, mei, ming
f	fan	fan, feng
d	door	da, dou, duo
t	tore	ta, tai, tian
n	need	na, nü, nian
l	lie	lai, lei, liang
z	adds	zi, zai, zuo
c	its	ci, cai, cuo
s	say	si, sui, suan

The next four consonants are all made with the tongue loosely rolled in the middle of the mouth.

zh	jelly	zhao, zhong, zhu
ch	chilly	che, chi, chang
sh	shy	shi, shei, sheng
r	razor	re, ri, rong

The next three consonants are all made with the tongue flat and the corners of the mouth drawn back as far as possible.

j	genius	jia, jiao, jian
q	cheese (as said in front of the camera!)	qi, qian, qu
x	sheet (rather like a whistling kettle)	xiao, xin, xue

Arch the back of the tongue towards the roof of the mouth for the last three consonants.

g	guard	ge, gei, gui
k	card	kai, kan, kuai
h	loch	he, hai, hao

Tones

Chinese is a tonal language. Every syllable in Chinese has its own tone. Pǔtōnghuà has four distinct tones plus a neutral tone. This means that syllables which are pronounced the same but have different tones will mean different things. For example, tāng pronounced in the first tone means soup, but pronounced in the second tone means sugar! But don't worry – all the four tones fall within your natural voice range. You don't have to have a particular type of voice to speak Chinese.

The four tones are represented by the following marks, which are put over the vowel such as nǐ you or over the main vowel of a syllable where there are two or three vowels, e.g. hǎo good, but guó country:

- 1st tone, high and level
- / 2nd tone, rising
- ∨ 3rd tone, falling–rising
- \ 4th tone, falling

The diagrams below will help to make this clearer.

Think of 1 as being at the bottom of your voice range and 5 at the top.

1st tone: Pitch it where you feel comfortable. Say 'oo' as in 'zoo'

1st tone

2nd tone

3rd tone

4th tone

All 4 tones together and keep going for as long as you can. You should be able to keep it up for maybe half a minute. When you have got used to that, change to another vowel sound and practise that in the same way and so on.

2nd tone: Raise your eyebrows every time you attempt a second tone until you get used to it. This is infallible!

3rd tone: Drop your chin onto your neck and raise it again. Then practise the sound doing the movement at the same time.

4th tone: Stamp your foot gently and then accompany this action with the relevant sound.

Neutral tones: Some syllables in Chinese are toneless or occur in the neutral tone. This means they have no tonemark over the vowel. They are rather like unstressed syllables in English, such as a in 'two of a kind'.

Tone changes

Occasionally syllables may change their tones.

- a Two 3rd tones, one after another, are very difficult to say. Where this happens, the first one is said as a 2nd tone: Nǐ hǎo! (How do you do?) is said as Ní hǎo.
- b If three 3rd tones occur together, the first two are normally said as 2nd tones: Wǒ yě hǎo (I'm OK too) is said as Wó yé hǎo.

We have listed the Chinese-English vocabulary under their radicals, using the order adopted in all dictionaries: one-stroke radicals occurring first, then two-stroke radicals, then three-stroke, and so on. The order in which, for example, the one-stroke radicals occur is also that adopted in most dictionaries.

We have listed the vocabulary under words (two or more characters), rather than single characters, except where they occur as such in the book.

Words with the same initial character are listed according to the number of strokes in the second character, i.e. the smaller the number of strokes in the second character, the earlier the word occurs. For example, (东)方 with four strokes occurs before (东)北 with five strokes, which in turn occurs before (东)南 with nine strokes.

You will see that 东 has a * after it. This is because radical indexes vary slightly between dictionaries and certain characters may appear under different radicals in different dictionaries; e.g. 东 may occur under 一 horizontal line in one dictionary but under 木 wood/tree in another. We have marked such characters with an asterisk and listed them under both possible radicals. We hope this will help rather than confuse you!

You should also remember that some radicals, such as 口, 目, 木, are not used in modern Chinese for the words for mouth, eye, wood/tree but act as the radicals of their modern-day equivalents, e.g. mouth is 嘴 zuǐ (not kǒu), eye is 眼 yǎn (not mù) and tree is 树 shù (not mù).

The number in the left-hand column indicates the number of strokes of a character excluding its radical. 'R' in the column represents a radical. In the case of radicals which are introduced in this book, the number in the right-hand column indicates the unit in which it first appears.
